

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

REPORT OF INSPECTORS OF FACTORIES AND WORKSHOPS.

To His Excellency John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois:

In accordance with section 9 of the statute creating this office, I have the honor to lay before you, in behalf of the inspectors, the third annual report of work done, with such recommendations as have occurred to us in the course of our effort to enforce the law.

The title of the factory law limits it strictly to manufacture. Mercantile institutions, laundries and offices do not come under the supervision of the inspectors.

As is shown in the statistical tables, there have been inspected in 1895 4,540 factories and workshops, in 48 cities and towns, employing 151,075 men, 30,670 women, and 8,624 children, a total of 190,369 employés.

Of these 4,540 places inspected, 1,715 were sweatshops employing 5,817 men, 7,780 women, 126 boys and 1,181 girls: a total of 14,904; an increase of 278 shops, 1,348 men, 1,668 women, and 586 children.

The number 4,540 does not indicate the total number of inspections made, because many places have been inspected repeatedly during the year; and the number of inspections is therefore considerably larger than the number of places.

The increase in work done over the two previous years is shown in the following tables:

	Places	Men	Women	Children	Total

Throughout this report, the word men is to be understood as including all males over 16 years of age, and the word children as embracing only those between 14 and 16 years of age. The Illinois factory law treats the working boy or girl over 16 as an adult. There is, therefore, nothing in the tables to show how large a part of the work of manufacture is carried on in Illinois by young people between the ages of 16 and 21 years. For this reason, the proportion of adults to children in this report appears larger and more favorable than in the reports of inspectors in States in which minors under 18 years or under 21 years of age are separated from adult employés by protective provisions.

This report places the results of the work of the Illinois inspectors in such form as to afford as accurate a knowledge as possible of the existing conditions in factories and workshops, so that further legislation may rest upon a survey of the exact state of the case. The text is based upon the tables relating to different branches of manufacture, and the completeness of these tables is due to the efficient and unwearied work of Assistant Inspector Stevens.

The sections of the statute which it is the duty of the inspectors to enforce are as follows:

FACTORY AND WORKSHOP INSPECTION LAW.

- a Manufacture of certain articles of cloth-ing prohibited in rooms in tenement houses used for eating or sleeping, ex-cept by families living therein.
 b Every workshop to be kept clean, free from vermin, infectious or contagious matter, and shall be subject to inspec-tion

AN ACT to regulate the manufacture of clothing, wearing apparel and other articles in this State, and to provide for the appointment of State inspectors to enforce the same, and to make an appropriation therefor.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That no room or rooms, apartment or apartments, in any tenement or dwelling house used for eating or sleeping purposes, shall be used for the manufacture, in whole or in part, of coats, vests, trousers, knee pants, overalls, cloaks, shirts, ladies' waists, purses, feathers, artificial flowers or cigars, except by the immediate members of the family living therein. Every such workshop shall be kept in a cleanly state, and shall be subject to the provisions of this act; and each of said articles made, altered, repaired or finished in any such workshop shall be subject to inspection and examination, as hereinafter provided, for the purpose of ascertaining whether said articles, or any of them, or any part thereof, are in a cleanly condition and free from vermin and any matter of an infectious and contagious nature; and every person so occupying or having control of any workshop as aforesaid shall, within fourteen days from the taking effect of this act, or from the time of beginning of work in any workshop as aforesaid, notify the board of health of the location of such workshop, the nature of the work there carried on, and the number of the persons therein employed.

§ 2. If the board of health of any city or said State Inspector finds evidence of infectious or contagious diseases present in any workshop, or in goods manufactured or in process of manufacture therein. and if said board or inspector shall find said shop in an unhealthy condition, or the clothing and materials used therein to be unfit for use, said board or inspector shall issue such order or orders as the public health may require, and the board of health are hereby enjoined to condemn and destroy all such infectious and contagious articles.

§ 3. Whenever it shall be reported to said inspector or to the board of health, or either of them, that coats, vests, trousers, knee pants, overalls, cloaks, shirts, ladies' waists, purses, feathers, artificial flowers or cigars are being transported to this State, having been previously manufactured in whole or in part under unhealthy conditions, said inspector shall examine said goods and the condition of their manufacture, and if upon such examination said goods, or any of them, are found to contain vermin, or to have been made in improper places or under unhealthy conditions, he shall make report thereof to the board of health, or inspector, which board or inspector shall thereupon make such order or orders as the public health shall require, and the board of health are hereby empowered to condemn and destroy all such articles.

§ 4. No child under 14 years of age shall be employed in any manufacturing establishment, factory or workshop within this State. It shall be the duty of every person, firm, corporation, agent or manager of any corporation employing children to keep a register in which shall be recorded the name, birthplace, age and place of residence of every person employed by him, them or it, under the age of 16 years; and it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or any agent or manager of any corporation, to hire or employ in any manufacturing establishment, factory or workshop any child over the age of 14 years and under the age of 16 years, unless there is first provided and placed on file an affidavit made by the parent or guardian. stating the age, date and place of birth of said child; if said child have no parent or guardian, then such affidavit shall be made by the child, which affidavit shall be kept on file by the employer, and which said register and affidavit shall be produced for inspection on demand by the inspector, assistant inspector and deputy inspectors shall have power to demand a certificate of physical fitness from some regular physician of good standing in case of children who may appear to him or her physically unable to perform the labor at which they may be engaged, and shall have power to prohibit the employment of any minor that can not obtain such a certificate.

*[§ 5. No female shall be employed in any factory or workshop more than eight hours in any one day, or forty-eight hours in any one week.]

§ 6. Every person, firm or corporation, agent or manager of a corporation, employing any female in any manufacturing establishment, factory or workshop, shall post and keep posted, in a conspicuous place in every room where such help is employed, a printed notice stating the hours for each day of the week between which work is required of such persons, and in every room where children under sixteen years of age are employed a list of their names, ages and place of residence.

^{*} Pronounced unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of Illinois, March 15, 1895.

§ 7. The words "manufacturing establishment," "factory" or "work-shop," wherever used in this act, shall be construed to mean any place where goods or products are manufactured or repaired, cleaned or sorted, in whole or in part, for sale or for wages. Whenever any house, room or place is used for the purpose of carrying on any process of making, altering, repairing or finishing, for sale or for wages, any coats, vests, trousers, knee-pants, overalls, cloaks, shirts, ladies' waists, purses, feathers, artificial flowers or cigars, or any wearing apparel of any kind whatsoever, intended for sale, it shall, within the meaning of this act, be deemed a workshop for the purpose of inspection. And it shall be the duty of every person, firm or corporation to keep a complete list of all such workshops in his, their or its employ, and such list shall be produced for inspection on demand by the board of health, or any of the officers thereof, or by the State inspector, assistant inspector, or any of the deputies appointed under this act.

§§ 8 & 9. Any person, firm or corporation, who fails to comply with any provision of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof shall be fined not less than three dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each offense. Said inspector, assistant inspector and deputy inspectors shall be empowered to visit and inspect, at all reasonable hours, and as often as practicable, the workshops, factories and manufacturing establishments in this State where the manufacture of goods is carried on. And the inspectors shall report the result of the same to the Governor. It shall also be the duty of said inspector to enforce the provisions of this act, and to prosecute all violations of the State.

LEGISLATIVE REGULATION OF MANUFACTURE.

In comparison with States which have longer ranked high as manufacturing States, where the development of manufacture has been of less sudden and overwhelming scope and vigor, Illinois is, in some respects, at a disadvantage. When the present constitution was adopted, in 1870, Illinois had some mines, some railroads and a well-established farming interest. But it did not rank among the manufacturing states, such as New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, which had even then begun to feel the disadvantages of unregulated employment of men, women and children, and were already looking towards a slow and gradual process of legislative regulation.

Between 1870 and 1890 Illinois reached the rank of third State in the Union (exceeded only by New York and Pennsylvania) in the value of its annual manufactured product. But, because this growth has been so sudden, the State has had nothing of the gradual amelioration of the conditions of work, by means of legislation, which has been accomplished in the older manufacturing states.

On the contrary, Illinois has taken two steps backward to one step forward; for the legislature has repealed the more valuable old compulsory education law and enacted the less valuable new one, and the Supreme Court has annulled the eight-hour section of the Factory Act.

The only step taken toward bringing Illinois into line with the other great manufacturing states is the enactment of the Factory Law of 1893; and, even in this, a fundamental misconception of the scope and value of factory inspection is shown by the tendency to place upon the factory inspectors the onerous duty of keeping children under 14 years of age out of the factories (while they should be under the care of the school authorities), and the failure to invest the office of inspector with the functions usual in other states.

While the factory law should, of course, supplement the school law, nothing could be more fatuous than to try to make it take the place of a good compulsory education law.

The proper function of the factory inspection department has long been recognized in all the more enlightened industrial communities as embracing not only the enforcement of child labor laws, but also the supervision of sanitary arrangements and safeguards of life and limb, and the enforcement of such restrictions of the hours of labor as the legislative branch of the government may have prescribed.

The statute of 1893 has now been in force a sufficient length of time to justify an enquiry whether it is accomplishing the purposes for which it was enacted. These purposes were three: To regulate the sweating system; to prohibit the employment of all children under 14 years, regulating the employment of children between 14 and 16 years of age; and to limit the number of hours of work of female employés to 8 per day.

The results obtained under the sections of the law which relate to child labor and the sweating system are fully set forth under the titles, Child Labor and Tenement House Manufacture.

THE SUPREME COURT ANNULS THE EIGHT-HOUR SECTION.

An essential purpose of the law was completely frustrated by the decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois, March 15, 1895 (Ritchie vs. The People), in which the eight-hour section was pronounced unconstitutional. This decision is printed in full (see Appendix A) because it is the most important point in the history of the factory law. With the abolition of this section the value of the statute was most seriously reduced.

In annulling this section, the ground taken by the court, namely, that regulation of the hours of labor is in excess of the powers of the legislature, is of curious interest in contrast with the established policy of those States and countries where this power to . regulate is no longer in question, where the principle is accepted and acted upon, that the care of the health of the factory employé is a legitimate subject for special legislation.

In France, Germany, and every other continental country, and in the more progressive States of this country, legislative regulation of the hours of labor has been found an effective measure for the protection of the health of the women and children employed in factories and workshops.

In England, the principle of the regulation of the hours of work of women and children has been established for more than a generation; and the regeneration of the working class in that country, from the degradation in which it was sunk in 1844, is attributed to the factory acts, and especially to this essential feature of them.

In contrast with the beneficent policy which has been followed during the last half century in that greatest manufacturing country of the world, the Supreme Court of Illinois, in 1895, rendered its decision upon arguments which were advanced and rejected in the English Parliament in "the Fifties."

The new feature introduced into the body of American legal precedent by this decision is the Court's assumption that it is not exclusively a matter of the constitution of Illinois. The State constitution could be altered, by a constitutional convention, so that the hours of labor could be regulated by legislative enactment, as they are in older industrial communities. The Court, however, makes the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States the basis of its decision. If this position were sound, all efforts for legislative restriction of the working day would be wasted, since there is no prospect of any immediate change in the Constitution of the United States.

Happily, the weight of precedent is not on the side of the Illinois court; the precedents of the courts of Massachusetts and New York are in the other direction. In Massachusetts, for tweety years past, it has been an established principle of the Supreme Court that the hours of labor of women and children may be regulated by statute. The Massachusetts precedent has had such weight that no case has been carried to the Supreme Court or to the Court of Appeals in New York. The constitutionality of its ten-hour law, though suits have been repeatedly brought, has never been disputed. Humanity and the Massachusetts precedent have heen regarded as sufficient basis for it.

It remained for the Supreme Court of Illinois to discover that the amendment to the Constitution of the United States passed to guarantee the negro from oppression, has become an insuperable obstacle to the protection of women and children. Nor is it reasonable to suppose that this unique interpretation of the Fourteenth Amendment will be permanently maintained, even in Illinois.

To the working people of this State, the action of the Supreme Court is an actual calamity, for it must never be forgotten, in considering the legislative restriction of the hours of labor, that this is not a question between the day of eight hours and the day of ten. In practice, the question is between an unlimited working day and a day restricted by statute to a reasonable maximum number of hours. The Court in this decision holds that any restriction of the hours of labor of adults is beyond the powers of the legislature.

Digitized by Google

The effect of the decision has been the reëstablishment of the unlimited working day for the thousands of women and children in the factories and workshops of this State. Again, as before the enactment of the law, little girls just fourteen years of again may be employed twenty consecutive hours, as they actually are in establishments known to the inspectors.

When it is remembered that the annual increase in the number of women and girls employed in factories and workshops in this State is counted by thousands; that there are 1,181 little girls in the sweatshops of Chicago; that inspectors of this department have found at work this year over 30,000 women, of whom more than 7,000 were in sweatshops, it is clear that the question of the legislative restriction of the hours of labor is not finally settled when the State Supreme Court has passed upon it in disregard of the body of American judicial precedents, in opposition to the experience of all civilized countries, and to the injury of the large and growing number of women and children engaged in manufacture within the Commonwealth.

The judicial mind has not kept pace with the strides of indestrial development in Illinois, and in this decision the Supreme Court shows that Illinois is in law to-day what it was in fact when the Constitution was adopted in 1870—an agricultural State. What, then, can be done to afford protection to the weakest and most defenseless breadwinners in this State?

The situation is far from hopeless. Even under the decision as it stands, farther legislative protection for minors is not impossible, as is pointed out elsewhere, under the title, "The Hours of Children." As to adults, the Court has reversed decisions upon points of far less urgency than this.

It may be that the Court is as advanced as that part of the community which is not yet thoroughly aware that Illinois is now one of the great manufacturing States. When the observation of a few more years has convinced the medical profession, the philanthropists, and the educators, as experience has already convinced the factory employés themselves, that it is a life and death matter to the young people who form so large a proportion of their number, to have a working day of reasonable length guaranteed by law, it will be found possible to rescue the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States from the perverted application upon which this decision rests. We may hope that Ritchie v. The People will then be added to the reversed decisions in which the Supreme Court of Illinois is so rich.

CHILD LABOR.

The legislature of 1895 made no change in the factory law, the child labor provisions of which are, therefore, the same as in previous reports, and apply only to children engaged in manufacture; the employment of children in offices, laundries, and mercantile occupations being still wholly without legislative restriction. The good effects of the law become more manifest each year, as well as the urgent need of extending it.

The percentage of children to total employés has fallen conspicuously in the brief time during which the law has been in force. In 1893 the percentage was 8.5; in 1894 it was 6.2; in 1895 it is 4.5. During the panic of 1893, when the total number of employés fell to its lowest, and but 76,224 persons were found at work by the inspectors there were 6,456 children under 16 years of age. In 1895 there were 8,624 children, while the total number of employés found at work rose to 190,369. In 1893 there were 85 children under 16 years of age in the thousand employés; in 1895 the number had fallen to 45 in the thousand.

The standard of size and health of the children employed has visibly improved everywhere outside of the sweatshops; and the change in this respect is conspicuous when a comparison is made with the children employed in laundries and department stores where the minimal age is not yet prescribed by law.

The prime object of the child labor sections is the prohibition of the employment in manufacture of children under 14 years of age; a secondary object is to weed out the diseased, deformed and conspicuously undersized children. There is no provision in the statute for limiting the employment of illiterate children, or for safeguarding life, limb or health of those who have reached 14 years; nothing to indicate that it is intended to restrict the number of children between 14 and 16 years of age. When a child is equipped with the age affidavit and health certificate, there is no farther power in any officer of the State to regulate the nature of the employment selected for the child.

The children found at work in factories and workshops in 1894 and 1895 were distributed as follows:

Distribution of Children.

721 1, 189 6, 220	586 142	284
8,130	128	284
	8,130	8,130 728 494

The following table shows that there are still employers of large numbers of children who find it profitable to comply with the requirements of the law, filing affilavits, wall records, registers, etc., and employ an increasing number of children from year to year. Six of these eight factories have more children this year than last, and five of the six appeared in the increase table last year.

McLaughlin, W. F. & Co	Chicago	Grocers' goods	107	87	2)
Aurora Cotton Mills Co	Aurora	Cotton gouds	105	67	38

From these two tables it appears that one child in seven of all the children found at work was in the employ of these eight companies; and one child in seven in the sweatshops. Last year the children in sweatshops were but one in eleven of all the children found in factories and workshops.

CHILDREN AT THE STOCK YARDS.

The fact that there are children employed in the Stock Yards is the most striking indication of the inadequacy of the present law. If there were no other reason for adopting the Ohio provision prohibiting the employment of children at any occupation daugerous to life, limb, health or morals, the condition of the children at the Stock Yards of Chicago would demand its immediate enactment. In 1895 children were found at work there as follows:

The total number of children is 242 this year compared with 320 in 1894; the number of girls having fallen from 18 to 5, and the number of boys being 65 less than last year. There is reason to suppose that this decrease of 78 children is due, in some measure, to frequent inspection and to the successful prosecution of eight of the thirteen managers of these firms upon charges of employing twenty-nine children, either under 14 years of age or without affidavits under 16 years of age.

There is no improvement in the conditions under which the children work. Some of the boys act as butchers, sticking sheep. hambs and swine; others cut the hide from the quivering flesh of freshly stunned cattle; still others sort entrails, pack meat, and make the tin cans in which goods are shipped. In several places a boy has been found at work at a dangerous machine, because his father had been disabled by it, and keeping the place pending recovery depended upon the boy's doing the work during the father's absence.

Work in itself harmless becomes ruinous for children at the Stock Yards by reason of the dreadful environment. No child can remain there without injury to body and mind. The presence of children at the Stock Yards is a daily disgrace to the State whose laws do not prohibit such employment.

CHILDREN IN SWEATSHOPS.

The point which merits especial attention in the tables of this report is not that the inspectors are more skillful and cover more ground each year, finding more children because more factories are inspected. It is not merely that the aggregate of children found at work is slightly greater than in any previous year. It is the concentration of children in one peculiarly injurious branch of industry, where they have increased so markedly as to outweigh a falling off in all other branches.

In 1893 the inspectors found in the factories and workshops of Illinois, 6,524 children at work; in 1894, 8,130, and in 1895, 8,624. The increase in the number found at work in 1895 is less than one-third the increase of the preceding year. The increase in 1894 was 1,603, and in 1895 was but 494. Since the inspectors visited 1,100 more factories and workshops during 1895 than they had inspected in the preceding year, this smaller increase might be regarded as somewhat encouraging but for the ugly fact, already pointed out, that it is wholly in the sweatshops of Chicago. There are 1,181 little girls in these shops in 1895 compared with 661 in 1894; and 66 more boys than last year. Since the total increase is but 494 children, in all the manufacturing industries in the whole State, and the boys have actually diminished by 33 in all industries, it follows that there has been a slight reduction in the number of children in factories, more than counter-balanced, however, by the increase of 520 little girls in the sweatshops in Chicago there were found 586 more children than in 1894, as appears from the table on page 18.

The number of children found at work in the factories and workshops in the State is 40 in 1,000 employés of all ages and both sexes; this number rises in the sweatshops to 88 children in 1,000 employés.

The number of children found at work in the factories and workshops in this State is 56 to every 1,000 males over 16 years of age. In the sweatshops this number rises to 223 children to every 1,000 males over 16 years of age.

For every five men (males over 16 years of age) at work in the sweatshops, there was found at work a little girl under 16 years of age.

In an increase of 3,802 sweatshop employés, 586 are children, or 154 in every 1,000. To an increase of 1,348 males over 16 years of age this increase of 586 children is 43.5 per cent., or 435 to every 1,000.

Not only were more children found at work in 1895 than in 1894 in the same shops, but sweaters who had never before employed children employed them in 1895.

The large and rapidly increasing proportion of children to adults is both a cause and a consequence of the miserable conditions which prevail in the sweatshops. In an industry where the majority of the employés are young girls and children, there can be no strong organization of men to obtain reasonable conditions of work. On the other hand, the absence of reasonable conditions tends to drive men out of the garment trades into any other occupation in which they can possibly find work. Hence only proverty stricken recent immigrants now recruit the ranks of male sweatshop employés, and the principal growth in numbers is found, year after year, among young girls and children. Indeed even the boys under 16 years of age are seeking other places in preference to these shops, as is shown by the fact that the increase in boys found at work was but 66 in the present year, while the increase in girls in the same time was 520. These figures tell the whole story. This increase in the number of children found at work took place in spite of persistent prosecution of sweaters for violation of the factory law. Thus, the record of prosecutions shows 30 sweaters convicted on 34 charges of employing children under 14 years of age; 129 convicted of employing 201 children under 16 years of age without affidavit; and five of these defendants prosecuted twice during the year. Of 488 children involved in suits, during the year, 235 were sweaters' victims.

The reason this continuous prosecution of all violations found is less effective in the case of garment contractors than of any other class of employers is that change is constant; contractors fail and go out of business; new ones open shops for a brief time, violate the law, are prosecuted, fail, disappear, and reappear later (perhaps under another name), only to be prosecuted anew for renewed violations. To prosecute every violation of the law costs the inspectors much time in obtaining evidence; and in this trade making an example by prosecution is without effect upon other offenders. In this shifting body of irresponsible employers only the man who has already paid a fine really believes that he can not with impunity violate the law. The great majority prefer to take their chances, and trust to escaping detection. It is an old observation that absence of stability in the garment trades diminishes the effect of all restrictions applied to the sweating system; and the endeavor to regulate child labor in sweatshops forms no exception to this rule.

The report of this department for 1894 showed that the 721 children found in the sweatshops of Chicago during that year were illiterate, while a majority of them could not speak English. In this respect there has been no improvement. That statement applies equally to the 1,307 children found at work in these shops in 1895.

No staff of ten deputies, with inspections to make throughout the State, can successfully watch sweatshops employing 1,307 children, with employers and parents conniving to evade and violate the law, and the city Board of Education declining to enforce the compulsory education law by prosecution. It cannot be claimed that this policy of inaction of the Board of Education is without bearing on the children recorded as over 14 years of age, for it is a notorious fact (although legal evidence may be hard to obtain) that the stature of the children, and the entries of the public school registers, show at least a part of these children to range in reality from 10 to 14 years.

Nothing effective can be done to redeem the sweated trades or the condition of the children employed in them, unless the strong arm of the law comes to the assistance of the unfortunate children by prohibiting them from crowding into these shops, at least until they have learned to read and write simple English.

In no case has a child of purely American parentage been found at work among the illiterate children of the sweatshops. The objection of a certain sort of immigrant parent to sending his children to school after they are old enough to earn 25 cents a week is a purely sordid one; and no other measure seems to offer so trenchant an answer to it as the assurance that he cannot put his child to work unless it has first received from school at least as much benefit as is embodied in a rudimentary knowledge of the English language.

CHILDREN IN THE GLASS WORKS AT ALTON.

The child labor sections of the law have proved of great benefit to the children employed in glass works. Their condition when the law went into effect was more pitiable than that of any other working children in this State. It was a matter of very great difficulty to get the law obeyed in this industry, because some of the glass companies maintained that the work of young children was absolutely indispensable to the manufacture of bottles and other light wares. The inspectors insisted that the children under 14 years of age must be replaced by older ones, or by some technical improvement. The Illinois Glass Company, at Alton, maintained that this was impossible. This company was so certain of the impossibility of conducting its business in compliance with the law, that a special investigation of the condition of its works and of the childron employed in them was ordered in January, 1895; all the other glass companies in the State having at that time taken steps to comply with the requirements of the law.

The following report sets forth the result of the special investigation. Since it was made, the company has accomplished that which it had declared to be impossible; making such a rearrangement of its "glory-holes" as enabled it to dispense with a large number of the smallest boys. While there are still children at work who are either dwarfish or have perjured affidavits, the number of larger boys has been increased, and 260 affidavits are kept on file. The Illinois Glass Company, the largest employer of child labor in the State, now finds it possible to comply absolutely with the child labor provisions of the law.

SPECIAL REPORT.

"SPRINGFIELD, January 10, 1895.

HON. JOHN P. ALTGELD, Governor of Illinois:

DEAR SIR:—I have the honor to submit, as requested by you, a detailed statement of the conditions of work of the children in the Illinois Glass Company's Works, at Alton.

Mr. Smith, president of the company, states that it employs about 1,800 persons, of whom about 25 are women and girls, and about 600, one-third of the total number, are boys under 16 years; and of these last about 200 are under 14 years of age.

The company has never kept the register required by law of the names, ages, residences, etc., of its employés under 16 years of age, and it is therefore impossible to state the exact number of boys under the legal age. We found, however, in one half hour of questioning on Monday afternoon last, twenty-four boys at work whose ages range from 7 to 12 years.

There are no affidavits on file for the boys between 14 and 16 years of age, no office register is kept, no wall records are posted in the rooms in which the children work; nor are the hours of work of the female employés posted.

The failure to file affidavits, keep a register, post notices, and correct wall records, shows the defiant disposition of the Glass Company. For compliance with these requirements involves no outlay of money, and does not, like the discharge of children under 14 years of age, interfere with its supply of employés.

At the time of our inspection on Monday last, President Smith refused absolutely to comply with any of the provisions of the law, and intimated that, if compelled to do so, and to discharge the children hitherto illegally employed under 14 years of age, the company would close its furnaces, discharge its employés, and turn them over to the soup-house for support.

On Tuesday this threat shrunk to the shutting down of two out of nine furnaces; and yesterday it had dwindled to a fear that "the company may be compelled to close, for want of boys, one of its furnaces."

On Monday President Smith alleged that there were no unemployed boys in Alton. Yesterday, when large numbers of well-grown boys were sliding and skating on the Mississippi, he modified his statement, saying, "No boys unemployed who are willing to work for $2.70 a week."

Other citizens tell me that the larger boys (12 to 16 years old) struck during the autumn against a cut in wages from 45 cents a day to 40 cents; all those who held out being blacklisted. The lads under 14 now receive but 40 cents a day. It is therefore clear that any dearth of available boys which the company may find inconvenient is caused by its refusal to pay wages acceptable to boys of legal working age.

The Glass Company, and the entire press of Alton, continually urge that the blowers must cease work unless furnished boys of less than legal age. In no case, however, has a blower made this statement. On the contrary, the men themselves told me that that they would prefer to have the company furnish them boys of legal working age; but that the company was unwilling to employ boys old enough to insist upon more than 40 cents a day.

The earnings of the blowers depend somewhat upon the speed of the boys who fetch and carry. The lads are therefore kept running at their highest rate of speed. It was impossible to get a coherent statement of name, age, address, etc., from any boy in the works. One would say, "My name is Faber," then run with his load of bottles and come back and say, "I live in a boat down by the river," then run for another load, and come back and say, "1 am going to be 8 next summer," and so on. Among twenty-four lads whom we questioned, not one ventured to pause long enough to put together any two of the above statements. The little runner's eye was invariably fixed, during these momentary pauses, on the blower for whom he worked.

The load of bottles which a boy carries at any one time is small, and he has no heavy lifting to do. The work is therefore described by President Smith as "light and easy." This assertion can be accepted as true only by persons who have not seen the little boys at work.

Young children, with heads and hands bandaged, where they have received burns from melting glass or red-hot swinging rods, dodging in all directions to escape the danger which each causes the other where their paths cross, while the blowers' long pipes swing over their heads, are not doing "light and easy" work. Loss of time from burns, and cost of clothing to replace burned coats and shoes (for fragments of cooling glass fall on the floor in all directions) were the burden of complaint of more than one poor mother, in telling us how hard her little boy found his life in the glass works.

While this conspicuous danger strikes the eye at once, the greater and more permanent injury to all the young children may be overlooked in a casual visit. The speed required and the heated atmosphere surrounding the fires, render the boys' continuous running most exhausting. An hour's steady trotting in the open air tires a healthy school boy of 7 to 14 years; but these little lads trot hour after hour, day after day, month after month, in the heat and dust.

This strain must be borne by night as well as by day, for there is no legal limit to the hours which may be required of the boys, nor any restriction upon night work for them. Nor is there any discrimination in favor of employing the older boys at night. Children 7 and 8 years old work until 3 a. m., and then, scautily clad, go from their exhausting running in the hot air beside the furnaces out over the ice, through the chill air of the early morning, to the tents and boats beside the frozen river.

All these conditions taken together render absurd the description of the boys' work for the glass company as "light and easy." In all the families which we visited none of the children have ever gone to school.

When the river is frozen, the people living in tents and boats have no water except ice melted over drift-wood fires. They are therefore unspeakably filthy, and the home habits of the children are strengthened in the grime of the furnaces.

The children are an unusually wretched-looking set. They are ill-fed, ill-clothed, profane, obscene, and in many cases unable to work without stimulants. Boys of 7 to 10 years old chew tobacco habitually, and boys 10 to 14 are in some cases habitual drinkers of the beer and whisky which are freely sold just across the street from the works. My attention was repeatedly called to this early dissipation, by all kinds of people, who characterized the children as "dissolute" or "tough," according to the habit of speech of the person.

The Mayor of Alton, Mr. J. J. Brenholt, acted as counsel for the glass company throughout my stay in Alton. He has also appointed to the school board Mr. Levis, an active member of the glass company.

The school board has never enforced the school attendance law. It has appointed no truant officer. The Humboldt school, which is nearest the glass works, is overcrowded. During the present session there have been 240 applications for admission to the Alton schools refused for want of accommodations. Yet there is no new school house now building or definitely projected. There is, however, an old building furnished with seats, which I am told by a member of the board could be used. It now stands empty.

While the glass company is directly represented in the city goverument by its counsel as mayor, and an active member, Mr. Levis, as school director, it has, through several agencies, a hold upon the dependent poor which is of great value to it, and which it uses relentlessly. Two cases illustrating this were related to me by a citizen of Alton. In one, a laborer who was making but $6 a week, though at night work, applied for transportation to go east. He was told by Mayor Brenholt to go back to the works until the end of the season. In another case, a woman and her little son, under the legal age, applied to Mayor Brenholt for relief, and were sent to the glass works together, and were set at work.

Mr. Jamison, a Baptist minister, official superintendent of the poor, is secretary of the organized charities also. The Unitarian minister, Mr. Wilson Backus, promised me to take charge of three alleged widows, whose little sons are about to be discharged from the glass works, and to try to obtain clothing to enable other discharged children to go to school. After conferring with Mr. Jamison, Mr. Backus informed me that no appeal could be made which might seem to reflect upon the glass company the suggestion that it had been employing pauper labor.

Wherever we order the discharge of children under 14 years of age, the employer confronts us with tales of the "widows" whose only support these unhappy children are. In the case of the glass works, the entire press of Alton took up this plaint in every issue of the papers, crying that the enforcement of this law would reduce these deserving widows to pauperism. The three alleged widows whom I called to Mr. Backus' attention are all that I have so far found. Inspector Merz and I visited each of them in her home. One we found living in a tent, with a son 15 years old, and two hitle children 4 and 2 years old. Mother and son work in the glass works, and as he is already of legal working age, the situation of this family remains unchanged by the discharge of children under 14 years.

The second "widow" rents a room in a brick house, and takes in washing. She is in receipt of scanty help for the payment of her rent and the purchase of food for hereelf and a baby. The discharge of her boy, 9 years old, will not "reduce her to pauperism," because she has been dependent upon charity, public and private, since the removal of her husband two years ago to an insane asylum, where he now is, a life-long, incurable patient.

The third "widow" is blind, and her husband, also blind, is in an asylum. This woman lives in a boat, with her four little children. Her boy of 7, who works in the glass works, can only use one eye. She stated to Mr. Merz and myself that, within a week, the superintendent of poor refused her application for coal to heat the wretched boat in which she lives, on the ground that the 40 cents a day each, earned in the glass works by her halfblind boy of 7 and his brother aged 9, was sufficient to support a family of five.

The glass works continually attract to Alton a stream of undesirable people, through their violation of the law by employing children under the legal age. No one of the three "widows" just mentioned is a native of or old resident in Alton. All have been drawn there by the certainty of getting their little children into the glass works. The blind "widow" with her family, floated down from above Plymouth for this purpose. We found an able bodied man employed by the Bluff line for 80 cents a day, his consumptive wife and baby shivering over a fire of drift-wood in a wretched boat, and his two boys, 8 and 10 years old, working in the glass works. The family, boat and all, came up the river about the beginning of last October, for the purpose of sending the children into the glass works. We visited an exhausted glass-blower, blessed with an $8 pension and five children under 14 years of age, who has just married a widow with a tent and six children under 15. Father, mother and the eleven children now live together in a tent between the river and the railroad, and the children work in the glass furnaces. The inevitable moral destruction of the two sets of children so hived needs no comment.

The foregoing cases, selected at random for investigation from a list made in an half hour's inspection at the glass works, amply show that the enforcement of section 4 of the law does not mean, as the press and the interested parties maintain, an increase of pauperism in Alton, but exactly the reverse.

FLORENCE KELLEY.

HOURS OF CHILDREN.

Until the legislature acts upon the Court's suggestion and passes a law limiting the hours of minors, the children are the direct sufferers under the decision of the Supreme Court which set aside the only legislative restriction in this State upon the hours of labor. Again, as before the factory law was enacted, the employer may extend the working day of his employés without let or hindrance, and among these employés may be delicate little children. There is no more protection for them against the cruel exaction of overtime work than there is for the strongest man employed. If the child has reached its 14th birthday, and the employer is armed with the parent's affidavit to that effect, the child may be lawfully required to work 20 hours at a stretch.

No law of Illinois is violated when little lads work all night in rolling mills where nails are made; when little boys, just 14 years of age according to the parent's affidavit (but 10 years old or less if judged by weight and size), fetch and carry bottles all night in glass works, trotting from furnace to cooling oven and back again at the call of the blower, in the glow of the melter's fires; then going out into the cold, dark night to stumble, ill-clad and shivering, to their homes. It is the tradition of these two occupations that their trade life is, and has always been, among the shortest in the skilled trades.

In the sweatshops of Chicago, both men and girls faint from exhaustion at their machines, and during the "rush" season in the garment trades this is no rare occurrence. Yet when a girl in a sweatshop is unable to ply her machine, by foot power, from seven in the morning to four the next morning, the sweater tells her-and truthfully-that there are others who will take her place and do his work on his terms. The overtaxed girls working in the sweated trades looked hopefully to the Factory law for regulation of their hours of labor. During the months when the 8 hour section of the law was in force, a great number of complaints were sent to this department concerning overtime work illegally exacted by sweaters. Usually the information in the case was anonymously given, but was found on investigation to be correct. The concealment of the writer's personality in the signatures "Tired Girl," "Victim," etc., was an indication of her inability to cope, openly and unaided, with the situation. Complaints of this nature are still received at this office. The girls in the sweatshops do not yet understand that there is now no power in any officer of the State to interfere in their behalf.

In Chicago children are employed long hours in two occupations which do not come under the factory law—the mercantile establishments and the laundries.

In many sections of this city the stores are kept open five evenings in the week, and the children employed in these stores work 10 and 11 hours a day. Stores having special holiday trade employ thousands of children during the season, and exact of them the same number of extra hours that are exacted from the older employés. On Christmas Eve these children were dismissed from the great department stores at hours ranging from 10:45 p. m. to 12:20 s. m. During the working days of the two preceding weeks, these children had been obliged to be alertly on duty from 10 to 12 hours per day. It is believed by all who have investigated holiday employment of children that permanent injury to the children results, in many ways, from it; and that no real gain accrues, not even temporary alleviation of financial stringency in their homes. The employment is for a very short time, and the pay received is very little. The child, demoralized by the taste of money-earning, spends days and weeks in seeking another place, not understanding that no employer wants her until the holiday season comes around again. Thus, for a few days' earnings she sucrifices a winter's school life. The physical strain of the work throughout long hours, for which there has been no gradual preparation, exhausts her vitality; and, in this exhausted condition, overheated by running in the warm air of the store, she goes out into the cold night. When this has been done night after night, throughout the holiday season, the child may have sacrificed, in addition to her winter's school life, her chance for normal development into healthy womanhood.

In laundries, the only limit to the hours of work of children seems to be the limit of their usefulness. It has been found that their little fingers become expert at "marking," and at this they are much employed, although they are also found at mangles and other dangerous machines used in steam laundries. Marking is oue of the occupations which superficial observers class as "light and easy," but handling soiled clothing on its way to the washing machine is not fit work for any child. Apart from the unfitness, there is great danger of infection; much greater in the case of young children exhausted by overwork in the heat and steam of the laundry than in the case of older persons. Marking is, unfortunately, one of the branches of laundry work which begins early in the day and holds out far into the night. The following complaint was received at this office on June 3, 1895:

"Goodhart's laundry has a number of little girls who don't look to be 12 years old. They worked last Saturday from 7:30 in the morning until Sunday morning at 3 o'clock. Their mothers were wild about them."

As laundries do not come under the Factory Act, the inspectors could do nothing in this case—not even order the discharge of the children under 14 years of age. It was not, therefore, surprising that a second complaint was received concerning this plant, dated September 9, 1895, stating that "children under 11 years old are working there, and are made to work overtime until 9 o'clock every night." These conditions prevail in all laundries employing children.

In every trade and occupation, including those where the work is not, in itself, injurious, it is observed that the places in which children are employed in large numbers are those where the worst general conditions for the employés prevail. When, therefore, the legislative restriction of the hours of labor, as a sanitary measure, was set aside by the Supreme Court, it was upon children and young girls that the decision fell most heavily. Not only had the investigations of the inspectors brought to light hundreds of examples of overwork of children, during the months preceding the decision, but many complaints against individual establishments, made both by employes and by others who had a humane interest in the children involved, had been filed in this office. Every such case was investigated, provided that the establishm-nt complained of came under the law; and whenever evidence was obtained that the hours of work were more than the statute prescribed, suit was begun. Several such suits were pending when the decision abridged the power of the inspectors.

These complaints have never ceased; on the contrary, their num. ber increases. Such complaints against the W. B. Conkey Company are here cited, because this case is a typical one, as one of the complaints came from an employé while the eight-hour section was still in force, and the other from an outsider, long after the decision was handed down and made public. The first was dated November 17, 1894, and read:

"They work their female hands from 7:30 a.m. to 8 or 9 o'clock p. m., without extra compensation to the week workers, or even furnishing supper. Very young girls are employed to carry heavy stacks of books.³⁷

Suit had been entered against this corporation for violation of the eight-hour section of the law before this complaint was received, and the result was then awaiting the decision of the Supreme Court in the cases carried before it by the Manufacturers' Association, of which Mr. Conkey was president. The establishment had been repeatedly inspected, affidavits were on file for all the children employed, and health certificates which had been required for some of the young girls engaged at heavy work had been duly procured. There was, therefore, nothing which this Department could do in response to the complaint. The second complaint against this establishment, received since the decision, shows that young girls are still required to work ten and twelve hours a day, under conditions peculiarly injurious to their health. A business man of the city, a wholly disinterested person, signs the letter, which is on file in this office.

"MRS. FLORENCE KELLEY, State Factory Inspector:

DEAR MADAM:-- I take the privilege of writing to you in regard to a case which to my mind ought to be investigated by you. I was this evening speaking to a young girl employed by W. B. Conkey & Co. The girl in question is 15 years of age and is employed on one of the folding machines in their binding department on the seventh floor of the build-ing on Plymouth Place between Van Buren and Harrison streets. She ing on riymouth riace between van Buren and Harrison streets. She related her story in the following way: They start at 7:30 a. m., have half an hour for dinner and work until 6 o'clock, except Saturday, when they stop at 5 o'clock. That makes fifty-nine hours a week without overtime. But these little girls, 14 to 16 years of age, are forced to work overtime every week a number of days, when they have only fifteen minutes for supper, and work to 8 o'clock, making nearly twelve hours per day. She also says that there are about fifteen girls under the age of 15 to 16 years who must be on their feet all day never getting u of 15 to 16 years who must be on their feet all day, never getting a chance to sit down, and being poorly paid at that. I can vouch for the truth of the foregoing. Very truly yours,

Almost daily appeals to this office come from mothers who hope that employers of their little girls may be prohibited from keeping them at work so late as to expose them to all the worst dangers of the city streets. A mother, whose girl of 13 years is marker in a laundry two and a half miles from her home, recently came to the office to entreat the Inspector's intervention. Her little girl, she said, worked five days and evenings each week, seldom getting away from work before 10 p. m., and then traversing alone the two and a half miles to her home, through a most dangerous section of the city, where midnight brawls, assaults and police raids are of frequent occurrence.

In all computation of the hours of working children in Chicago, this time spent in going to and from the place of employment must be taken into account. The journey is generally some miles long, and not infrequently the small wage of the child necessitates its walking. The hours needed for the sleep of a young child are thus seriously curtailed. The exhausted children from the stores reach their homes at any time from 10 p. m. to 2 a. m., according to the hour of leaving work and the distance of the home from the store. In an investigation of the employment of children under 14 years of age in a pickle factory in Bowmanville, (see Record of Convictions) the inspector found that these children, aged from 10 to 14 years, were obliged to leave their homes before 4 o'clock in the morning in order to be at the factory when the whistle blew for the work to begin, which was at 6:30.

To the physical and moral deterioration of children consequent upon this failure to regulate the hours of their work must be Their hours of labor being unreadded the educational loss. stricted, the poor opportunity is thereby rendered illusory which is offered through the night school to the working child in more progressive States, in which the hours of employment of minors are fixed by law. It frequently happens in Illinois that a weary child has no sooner begun to attend night school than a notice is posted in the factory that failure to work throughout the evening will be followed by discharge. Where evening work is not required, the long day of ten hours, followed by the journey home on foot, so exhausts the child that it creeps into the evening school utterly incapable of mental exercise. The experience of teachers of night schools is that it is impossible to keep children awake over their books who have been shut up in store and factory through the day.

Legislative limitation of the hours of labor for children is the rule followed in most of the older manufacturing States and countries. That this course may be adopted in Illinois without infringement upon the constitution is suggested in the decision of the Supreme Court in Ritchie vs. The People. In that case the issue was upon a law restricting the hours of all females, and the Court held that this was in excess of the powers of the legislalature; but, say the Court:

"We do not wish to be understood by anything herein said as holding that section five [the eight-hour section] would be invalid if it was dimited in its terms to females who are minors."

Throughout the decision the contention is concerning females only, and hence the word female appears in this qualifying phrase. It is reasonable to assume, however, that the intimation contained CHILD LAPOR.

in this clause, viz: that the hours of labor for young girls may be fixed by law, applies equally to male minors. It seems, therefore, to be, in the judgment of the Supreme Court, within the power of the legislature of Illinois, to fix by law the hours during which minors may be employed in any one day; and the recommendations of this Department are that an eight-hour law be re-enacted, applicable to children of both sexes; and that the employment of any child, at any occupation, between the hours of 9 p. m. and 6 a. m. be prohibited.

THE MEDICAL CERTIFICATE CLAUSE.

Section 4 of the law provides that the inspectors may demand a certificate of physical fitness from some regular physician of good standing in case of children who may appear to them physically unable to perform the labor at which they are engaged.

The enforcement of this clause was expected to effect the removal from factories and workshops of the large number of children who are deformed or manifestly diseased. Persistent enforcement of it was also expected to enable the inspectors to obtain the discharge of all children engaged in occupations injurious, whether because of the nature of the materials used, or of the temperature, or of the processes carried on, or for any other reason. Incidentally, parents inclined to perjury were to be checkmated by the requirement of a certificate of physical fitness for all children conspicuously undersized.

Unfortunately, the statute did not empower the inspector to prescribe who shall make the certificate, nor that the making of it shall be preceded by the examination of the child or of its place of work. It was probably assumed by the legislature which enacted the statute that these essentials could be left to the faithfulness and honor of the medical profession. The experience of two and a half years compels us to the conclusion that this confidence was misplaced.

The medical certificate clause has been rendered nugatory by the reckless manner in which dispensary and "company" physicians have issued certificates gratis to all comers, irrespective of the physical condition of the child or the injurious nature of its occupation. In no case known to the inspectors has a child for whom a certificate has been required failed to obtain one, either from the sources mentioned, or from some ignorant practitioner, upon payment of a sum ranging from 25 cents to $2.

The following extract from a letter sent from this department to a physician of not only "good and regular," but excellent standing in the profession, indicates the carelessness with which these certificates are issued by physicians who are neither ignorant nor unscrupulous.

"Permit me to call your attention to a number of health certificates signed by you, and held by Kohn & Walleck, cigar makers, No. 257 Maxwell street, on behalf of a number of children in their employ. Their shop is one of the worst in the city. We have prosecuted the tirm, and convicted them of employing children under the legal age. We have compelled them to separate their shop from their living rooms. While their premises now technically comply with the law, they are still so bad that the only thing that remained for us to do was to require health certificates, feeling sure that no physician could certify a child physically fit to work in that shop."

An immediate response to this letter contained the frank admission that the duty of visiting the shop had not presented itself to the mind of this busy physician.

Such appeals as this have been successfully made only when addressed to honorable members of the profession. Whenever the number of children employed is sufficiently large to make it worth while for the employers to secure certificates by wholesale, there appears to be no difficulty in obtaining physicians ready to certify that every child in any establishment is fit for work at the labor at which it is engaged; and to continue to issue certificates to each new child, without seeing either the child or its work.

When the contractor in a sweatshop has been prohibited from employing a child until a certificate is obtained, it has been only a question where the nearest unscrupulous practitioner has his office. Sooner or later one is found who issues a certificate, correct in form, but bearing no relation to the child's size, age, physical condition, or to the nature of the occupation.

The children who thus fall victims to the greed of employers by the aid of careless, unscrupulous or ignorant physicians, are those most in need of the protection which a valid medical certificate law would give them; for the inspectors require these certificates only where the child is manifestly ill, or undersized, or working in most unsanitary conditions, or at a dangerous machine.

In all occupations, factory children are of smaller average stature than public school children, as was shown in the report for 1894. The condition of the children for whom the protection of the medical certificate is needed falls below the normal condition of the average factory child. They are the lowest grade of child labor in stature and intelligence, and their health may safely be described as generally bad. They are the children who work among the worst surroundings, from all points of view, as in the sweatshops, the stock yards, the glass works, and in those great manufacturing establishments where, throughout long hours, their little hands feed dangerous machines.

In cutlery works, small boys sit over emery wheels, at dry grinding, so ruinous to the health that it has been forbidden to all minors in England for a generation past; but in the office of the cutlery works are filed medical certificates for all these boys, made by physicians who have never been inside the works, and know less of the effects of the employment than do the boys themselves. In a great can factory, boys crouch ten and twelve hours a day upon a shelf so hung in mid air that they can neither sit nor stand, their bleeding fingers pushing sharp-edged pieces of tin into shutes; but the company doctor issues their health certificates as regularly as the company notary fills in their affidavits.

This experience of two and a half years has more than fulfilled the apprehension expressed in the report for 1893, made five months after the Factory Act took effect, when it was said of the health certificate clause:

The value of this provision of the law depends upon the intelligent cooperation of the medical profession; for, if the certificates are granted merely pro forma, upon the representation of the employer or of the child, the object of the law is nullified. The physician who grasps the situation, and appreciates the humane intent of the law, will always find time to visit the factory and see under what conditions the child is working. Otherwise the certificate may be worse than valueless, and may work a positive injury to a child whom the inspectors are trying to save from an injurious occupation.

The only value of the health certificate clause to the working children has been found in the opportunity which it afforded for enlisting, for a time, the services of two public spirited physicians, the record of whose work, briefly set forth in the report of 1894, is re-printed here, in the hope that, although the legislature of 1895 made no improvements in the factory law, its successor may not fail to act upon this valuable information.

REPORTS OF DRS. BAYARD HOLMES AND JOSEPHINE MILLIGAN.

During four months 135 factory children were given medical examination in the office. The inspectors required these children to secure health certificates because they were undersized or seemed to be ill, or were working in unwholesome shops or at dangerous occupations. They were, children sworn by their parents to be 14 years of age, or over.

Each child was weighed with and without clothing; had eyes and ears tested; heart, lungs, skin, spine, joints and nails examined, and forty measurements taken.

Of the 135 children, 72 were found sufficiently normal to be allowed to continue work. Of the 63 refused certificates, 53 were not allowed to work at all, and 10 were stopped working at unwholesome trades, as tobacco stripping, grinding in cutlery factory, running machines by foot power, and crimping cans. These were advised to look for lighter work.

Of those to whom certificates were refused, 29 were undersized, otherwise normal; i. e., the parents had probably forsworn themselves as to the children's ages. Certificates were refused because of defects to 34, or 26 1-10 per cent. of the number examined.

In several cases, different diseases existed in the same child. There were 14 children with spinal curvature, 12 with heart murnur, 6 with iung trouble, 24 with enlarged glands, 25 with defective sight, 6 with defective hearing, and 56 with defective teeth.

The examination of girls resulted as follows:

From sweat shops, 30 examined; 5 had spinal curvature; 1 an organic lesion of the heart (mitral insufficiency); 2, irritable hearts; 2 were anæmic, and of these one had also incipient phthisis.

From tobacco factories, 11 examined; 1 had spinal curvature; 1, enlarged glands in neck and axilla; 2, defective sight.

From baking powder factory, 8 examined; 1 had spinal curvature; 1, enlarged glands; 2, defective sight and slight deafness; 1 had sore hands from using crimping machine; 1 had mutilated forefinger from a swedging machine. From feather duster factorles, 7 examined; 2 had enlarged glands in the neck.

From gum factory, 4 examined; 1 had spinal curvature.

From candy factories, 16 examined; 2 had diseases of the skin.

From book binderies, 4 examined; 1 was anæmic; 1 had enlarged glands in the neck.

From necktie factory, 1 examined; heart murmur.

From a yeast factory, 1 examined; normal.

From cracker bakery, 1 examined; had organic lesion of the heart.

From pop corn factory, 1 examined; anæmic.

Total number of girls examined, 85; certificates granted, 50; certificates refused, 35.

The examination of boys resulted as follows:

From sweat shops, 6 examined; 3 had spinal curvature; 1, hernia; 2, enlarged glands.

From cutlery factory, 12 examined; 5 had enlarged glands; 2, tuberculosis; 2, spinal curvature.

From tobacco factories, 9 examined; 4 had enlarged glands.

From metal stamping factories, 10 examined; 2 had enlarged glands; 1, bronchitis; 1, tuberculosis; 1, spinal curvature; 1, syphilis.

From picture frame factories, 3 examined; 1 was anæmic and had enlarged glands; 1, tuberculosis.

From candy factories, 2 examined; 1 had skin eruption.

From cracker bakery, 1 examined; had phthisis.

From photographic enlargement shop, 1 examined; was anæmic and scrofulous.

From glass sign shop, shoe shop, cabinet shop, organ factory, 1 boy each; found normal.

 \Rightarrow Total number of boys examined, 50; certificates granted, 22; certificates \uparrow refused, 28.

Wherever a medical certificate has been required by an inspectoremployer and child have been notified that the necessary medical examination would be made, free of charge, in this office. These examinations have been made by two over-worked volunteer physicians, the appropriation of the department being wholly insufficient for the payment of any medical fees. Only when the child was examined by these physicians has the certificate been given or withheld in exact accordance with the state of the child's health, and with regard to the nature of its occupation; the factory or workshop being invariably visited by the physician.

It is manifest that the purposes of the medical certificate provision can be fulfilled only by such conscientious thoroughness in examination and inspection, preliminary to the granting or withholding of the certificate. But the profession at large cannot afford the time requisite for all this; and while, for this reason, an honorable physician may refuse the request for his signature to certificates, the charlatans will continue to turn dishonest pennies by signing them, as they have done hitherto.

It is, therefore, the belief of the inspectors that this clause can be made to fulfill its functions only when the issuing of certificates is restricted to physicians appointed as regular members of this staff.

DANGEROUS OCCUPATIONS.

There are many industries which are injurious by reason of the materials used or of conditions which the work involves.

The filling of torpedoes and the making of firecrackers (an occupation in which very young children were employed until the custom was broken up under the factory law) involve the handling of powder, frequent small explosions full of danger to the child's eyes, and the constant menace of fatal explosion of the whole plant. The expectation of explosion is shown in the manner of arranging the work rooms. In Cook county the Grosse Point works of the Chicago Fireworks Company are distributed is several cottages, pretty well isolated, and the powder is kept and handled in the basement only. A similar arrangement, on a much larger scale, is made in the establishment of the same company at East St. Louis.

In the manufacture of cigars, boys and girls are employed, the smaller ones as strippers, and the larger ones as rollers, bunchers and molders. Apart from the evils which always attend a tenement house industry, such as cigar-making has remained in Chicago, the saturation of the children with nicotine is only a question of time. In tobacco factories there are processes during which no fresh air can be admitted to the work rooms, and the atmosphere becomes intolerable to all save those who are already sufficiently saturated not to notice it. Nicotine saturation for little girls and boys is not, however, a thing to be tolerated.

Among the paper box makers, the serious danger of the machine proclaims itself whenever an accident happens. Equally serious, though less sensational, is the injury wrought continually and in silence by arsenical paper in contact with delicate skin, and by rotting paste which destroys the appetite and undermines the digestion. In paint works, soap works, chemical and rubber works, and photographic shops, the absorption of poison, through the skin and the membranes, is no less deadly for being less conspicuous than the accident which finds its way into the daily paper.

In the unwholesome conditions surrounding the garment-working children there is no change. Concerning them it remains true, as was said in the report of 1894: "Many of the boys in these shops are buttonholers, and every little buttonholer is destined, sooner or later, to develop a lateral curvature of the spine. Other boys run foot-power machines and the fate that awaits these is consumption of the lung or intestine. Many of the little girls are 'hand girls,' whose backs grow crooked over hemming, felling, and sewing on buttons at 50 to 80 cents a week. The rest of the girls run foot-power machines and incur both the tuberculosis which they share with the machine boys and also pelvic disorders ruinous to themselves at present and to their children in the future."

The stamping industry is one of the worst mutilators of children. Even where an adult operates a die machine, and the machine is guarded, danger is only minimized, because the fingers must be used in pushing the tin or other material under the descending die. When children are the operators, increasing the danger by their natural carelessness, mutilations are common, accidents sometimes result fatally, and the loss of a hand is not rare. Employers in this industry appear to learn nothing by experience, as an inspector found, in a stamping works, several of the most danger-/ ous machines manned by boys whose affidavits showed them to be under 16 years, while. beside them were working one man with a broken arm and another with one arm gone.

A more insidious but not less certain agent of destruction in stamping works is poisoned air. The use of acids upon hot metal appears to be a necessity of the industry, and wherever the sanitary conditions of such establishments are regulated by law exhaust fans are required and furnished. Where these are not used, the acid fumes are a form of slow poison for the men. women and children at work. An illustrative case is furnished in the recent death of Anastasia Fortier, of 379 Blue Island Avenue, Chicago. Miss Fortier was 21 years of age, and had been in the employ of the Chicago Stamping Company about 18 months. She was engaged, 10 and 12 hours a day, in the seemingly light occupation, of rubbing hot tin, as it came from ovens, with sawdust and acid. The gradually increasing effect of the absorption of poison obliged her to absent herself from work more and more frequently, a few days at a time. When finally a physician was called in, the case was diagnosed as blood poisoning from the inhalation of acids, and further employment in the stamping works was forbidden; but the prohibition came too late, and the patient died a few days after.

The laundries entail exhaustion from heat and dampness, and long, irregular hours of work. The back of the girl who stands all day, and far into the night, is curved by forcing the weight of her body upon the left foot while she starts and stops the machine with her right foot on the heavy treadle. Even when no mangle accident makes her a cripple, the child who works steadily in a laundry is doomed to life-long invalidism. The pallor of these children moves the pity of all who see them at their work.

The glassworks share with laundaries the heat, night work and over-exertion of the children. The very nature of their work makes the glassworkers rheumatic, tuberculous wrecks before they reach the years which from the prime of life for the professional man. But, besides all this, the glass bottle works have a peculiar danger of their own in the flying particles of glass, and the rapidily moving blow-pipes. The proportion of blind and partially blind children in glass-making communities is unusually large. The children are obliged to move about very rapidly, and to keep on foot and at work when actually staggering with sleep. Collisions, under these circumstances, are frequent; and the red-hot pipe in the hands of one little lad ruins for life the sight of another. In the Stock Yards, the glass works, and many establishments in which heavy work is required of children, there are three and even four times as many affidavits kept on file as there are children found at work at any inspection. This is made necessary by the precarious health of the children, whose work is interrupted by periods of illness. In some places, notably the glass works, intermittent chills are a regular part of the experience of the working children.

The community owes it to the children, and to the future, to guard them while at work from mutilation and from injury by foul air and poisonous materials. It is proposed by an Ohio authority to make it a criminal offence to use a dangerous machine where a safety device could be applied. The Federal authorities of the Swiss republic are favoring a proposal to make it a criminal offence to endanger life or limb of any employé. In several American States the injury wrought by employment in manufacture is steadily reduced by legislative provisions.

PROTECTION FROM FIRE.

In every State which has factory inspectors, measures have been enacted intended to protect employés in large buildings from danger by fire, and the enforcement of them has been made the duty of the inspectors. Long before this was undertaken, municipal ordinances had been enacted in various large cities, intended to provide against accidents in case of fire. It was because these ordinances were too often not enforced, the officers of the city being swayed by local influences, that the regulation was placed in the hands of officers of the State. New York City and Boston have had fire escape ordinances for many decades, yet the legislatures of New York and Massachusetts were among the first to enact state laws regarding fire escapes, vesting the enforcement of the laws in the State Factory Inspectors.

In his report for 1894, the New York inspector says:

The number of fire escapes erected this year is not so great as in former years, for the reason that the factories are now pretty nearly all supplied. and the work to be done in this direction is mainly with regard to new buildings, and in buildings where the interior has been remodeled or is, for the first time, used for workshop purposes. A great many old-time straight-ladder fire escapes have been altered under our orders, by putting on inclined stairways with handrails. This improvement has been required more especially where women are employed. It is gratifying to note that no lives have been lost during the past twelve months through fires in factories because of lack of any means of escape within the power of this Department to order supplied. In a number of instances, the value of the escapes put up under the order of the inspectors was put to the test with the most satisfactory results. * *

Ordinances of a similar character applying to factories were in existence at the time of the passage of the factory law, and the enforcement of this act proved that the local authorities had not exercised their powers, or their notifications were disobeyed. It requires some authority not likely to be swayed by local influences, to enforce a law relating to the property interests of persons who may be in their way very important and powerful in their own communities.

The Illinois inspectors, therefore, make no new departure when they recommend that there be a State law providing for protection from fire, and vesting in the inspectors the enforcement of the act in all establishments coming under the factory law. Daily in the round of their duties the inspectors see conditions which threaten loss of life to employés in case of fire or panic; but these conditions they have no power to order changed. Such a catastrophe as the "Woolen Exchange" fire, in Chicago, November 22, 1895, might occur in hundreds of factories in Illinois. This fire. in which one girl and four firemen were killed, while 10 other persons were injured, one fatally, focussed for the moment the attention of the public on the inadequacy of the municipal ordi-The coroner's jury nances regulating fire escapes, as now enforced. in the six cases rendered a verdict censuring the firm of Kub, Nathan & Fischer, owners of the building, pointing out that it was both improperly constructed and devoid of means for escape in case of fire. It was further shown that access to such fire escapes as there were, had been cut off by stacking goods and other material in passageways, and that employes of different firms in the building had not been instructed as to the location of the escapes.

In 1893 the inspectors called attention to the dangerous condition of the Lancaster Caramel factory, Chicago, where they found over 150 children under 16 years of age at work, on the 2d, 3rd and 4th floors of a 5-story building; the building equipped with wooden stairs only, and these, very narrow and steep, slippery with candy sediment, without any side railing. The manager of the factory was advised to put a guard rail on the inside stairs and to procure adequate fire escapes. No power is vested in the inspec-tors to require these things to be done, and they were not done. On February 26, 1895, a fierce fire suddenly blazed out on South Jefferson street, a block away from the caramel factory, which was on West Harrison street. The children in the factory became panic-stricken, and a stampede began on the fourth floor, which extended to the floors below. Few of the children had reached the stairway leading to the second floor before one girl fell down the stairway; other little ones following fell upon her body, and tripped those behind them. The steep, narrow passage was soon blocked and, before the few adults at work could quiet the tumult, several children were seriously hurt, some of them receiving injuries from which they have not, at this writing, recovered. Had the fire really been in this factory, instead of a block away, while this struggle was going on, great loss of life would inevitably have resulted.

These two examples sufficiently show the danger from fire, which is a general one, and is growing as high buildings become more commonly used for manufacturing purposes.

It should be made the duty of the Factory Inspector to order necessary fire escapes, to see that inside and outside stairways are safe and sufficient, that doors swing outward and are not locked during working hours, that windows are accessible, and that floors of buildings are provided with suitable means for extinguishing fires.

ACCIDENTS.

It is much to be deplored that manufacturers in Illinois are not required to report to the inspectors every accident which occurs in a factory, so that the circumstances might be investigated, and a repetition of the occurrence avoided. For lack of this provision, this report contains no such comprehensive information upon this important subject as is contained in the reports of the inspectors of several other States.

No Illinois statute regulates the ventilation of workrooms, the provision of toilet facilities, fire escapes, machine guards; security for elevators, hoists and hatchways; and, in general, all those precautions against accidents and disease which experience in older manufacturing States has shown to be needful.

In New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio the requirement that every accident be promptly reported to the inspectors by the proprietor of the factory or workshop in which it occurs, is a long-established feature of the factory law. This provision enables the inspectors to make prompt and effective investigation of accidents, and to devise ways of preventing repetition of the same form of danger.

This, however, is merely an adjunct to the requirement that the factory inspectors shall inspect all machinery, shafting, gearing, elevators, hoiste, and elevator shafts; and shaft order such changes as may be necessary to secure safety of life and limb for all persons on the premises.

In the same year in which the Illinois factory law was enacted a far more comprehensive one was adopted in Minnesota, containing provisions for safeguarding factory employés. One result of the enforcement of these provisions is most instructively stated in the latest report of the Minnesota Bureau of Labor. The commissioner's conclusion is that children engaged in dangerous occupations cannot be adequately safeguarded, and he therefore urges that all such employment of children be prohibited, as is shown in the following extract, condensed from his report:

The accidents by gearing, jointers, paper-box machinery, projecting setscrews, planing machines, saws, shapers, and miscellaneous machinery, can be quite largely eliminated by the use of guards.

Young people, even more than older ones, do not appreciate the value of guards for dangerous machinery and places; the young are less ready to use safety devices than are the old. This is known to be the case more markedly with persons under 16. A few old workmen are headstrong and reckless, and refuse to use the safeguards provided by their employers; but a greater number of such cases are found among the young. who as yet have not had experience fitting them to measure hazard and guard themselves against risk of injury to life, health and limb.

This truth is emphasized by the accidents to boys under 16 years of age reported to this department; these were fifteen in number. Probably if the ages of all injured persons were accurately given, this number would be found to be twice as large. These fifteen accidents were all caused by dangerous machinery and appliances. Of the fatal accidents, two occurred to boys not employed by the factory owners, but playing or loitering near unguarded appliances.

Of accidents to females there were reported twelve, of which four were by laundry machines, seven by paper-box machinery, and one upon a small power press. Of these, eight were to girls under 16 years of age. The greater number of these accidents to young girls were upon machinery used in the manufacture of paper boxes.

From the data in this report it is shown that of the male operatives one in 60 was hurt, and one in 1,378 was killed by factory accidents. Of boys under 16, one was hurt for every 38 employed, and one was killed for every 189 employed. No female operative was killed; one woman over 16 was hurt for every 1,044 employed, and one girl under 16 to every 32 employed. Of the females over 16 who were hurt, all but one were under 21 years.

The figures show that the girls under 16 have thirty-three times the probability of being hurt of those over 16, and that practically all accidents to female factory operatives befall the young and inexperienced; those who are unable to measure or apprehend the hazard of operating a dangerous machine. The figures also show that a boy in a Minnesota factory has a probability of accident about twice that of an adult; and that his chance of fatal accident is over seven times as great as that of a grown man.

Some people speak of accidents to young children as due to carelessness. They thereby seek to throw the responsibility for such casualties upon the children. Maybe the child is careless. But when a boy's chance of death from dangerous machinery is seven times as great as that of a man, and when the chance of accident is thirty-three times greater for girls under 16 than for those over that age, the State should prohibit the employment of all boys and girls at dangerous occupations.

In spite of the work of large staffs of experienced inspectors, there occurred, in 1894, in the States mentioned, accidents as follows: Pennsylvania, fatal, 41; otherwise, 528. New York, fatal, 73; otherwise, 857. Ohio, fatal, 17; otherwise, 222. Massachusetts, fatal, 24; otherwise, 624.

The Illinois inspectors have no responsibility as to safeguarding, corresponding to that which is imposed upon similar officers in other States. For information concerning accidents, they are dependent upon the newspapers; and only the most conspicuous and sensational accidents find their way into print. Though a child may be placed to-day at an unguarded machine which killed its predecessor yesterday, and though the newspapers may publish the facts, and the inspectors investigate the circumstances, no officer of the State has authority to order the machine guarded, or the child removed from it.

The following items, concerning accidents occurring in Chicago in 1895, taken from the daily press, show the need existing in Illinois for the best statutory provisions now in force in other States for safeguarding life and limb:

Edward Crout, elevator boy (under 16 years) in Ogden, Sheldon & Co.'s building, 228 Fifth Avenue, crushed and instantly killed between cage and shaft, at the fifth floor.

Edward Kellingburg, employé of Straus, Glaser & Co., clothing manufacturers, 248 Monroe street, fell down elevator shaft; died of injuries in county hospital.

James Allen, janitor for Rosenwald & Weil, clothing manufacturers, Jackson street and Fifth avenue, fell down elevator shaft from sixth story: killed.

At the Augustana Hospital, Mary Anderson, a child 9 years old, was killed by falling down elevator shaft. The coroner's jury censured the authorities of the hospital for allowing a boy 13 years of age to run the elevator.

William Curtis, employé in the Thompson curling iron factory, at 6151 LaSalle street, stepped into an open elevator shaft; fell three stories; seriously injured.

August Heintz and John Miller, employés of the Morgan Co., manufacturers of sash, doors and blinds, at Twenty-second and Union streets, were in an elevator when the cable broke, hurling them to the bottom of the shaft; the skulls of both were fractured.

Charles Filtz, 15 years old, employed in the Chicago Fire-proof Covering Co., Bowmanville, fell down the elevator shaft; suffered concussion of the brain.

N. D. Murray and David Hennessy, bakers for the Bremner Baking Co., 76 O'Brien street, were injured in an elevator accident. Murray sustained internal injuries, and had leg sprained; Hennessy's right foot was caught and crushed between the car and elevator.

Four employés of Max Cohn, clothing contractor on the fourth floor at 323 Franklin street, were injured by fall of elevator. Abraham Clanvitz, right leg broken: Herman Cohn, injured internally; Joseph Rosenberg, injuries to spine and abdomen, reported fatal: and Hyman Clanvitz, 14 years old, who was running the elevator, injured internally. No watchman was employed in this building: no person was responsible for the elevator: and the men, women and children employed in the clothing shop on the fourth floor, and in David Goldstein's cigar shop on the third floor, were in the habit of starting and running the elevator to suit their own convenience.

Of the nine elevator accidents in this list, three occurred while children under 16 years of age were in charge; a boy of fifteen, one of fourteen and one of thirteen. All other States having factory legislation provide against such accidents by requiring the guarding of elevator shafts and doorways; and several States make double provision by prohibiting the running of elevators by boys. The following has been in force some years in New York, and has been more recently adopted in Massachusetts:

"No minor under 15 years of age shall have charge over or operate an elevator, and no minor under 18 years shall have charge over or operate an elevator running at a speed of more than 200 feet per minute."

In his report, January 1, 1895, the Massachusetts Inspector commends the working of this law as follows: "The employment of young and heedless boys who were inclined to relieve the monotony of their work by reading while on duty, or who were disposed to be reckless and cause serious accidents, has ceased; and at last the limit of age of persons in charge of elevators running at a speed of over 200 feet per minute has been fixed at 18 years." The Connecticut law, adopted in 1893, provides: "No person, partnership or corporation shall permit or employ any person under the age of 16 years to have the care, custody, operation or management of any elevator."

The Connecticut Inspector says, in his report for 1894: "The prohibition of the employment of boys under 16 in the care and running of elevators has been generally observed. The inexperience and carelessness of boys scarcely in their teens have been, in years past, largely responsible for many of the elevator accidents reported. The prohibition of the employment of such persons is wise."

Seven States, Rhode Island, Missouri, Michigan, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, forbid the cleaning by children of machinery in motion, the age limit being set at 21 years in some of the States. In Ohio, any employment of children at dangerous machines is prohibited. In all these States the factory law provides for safeguarding belting, cables, shafting, gearing, drums, and other machinery and appliances. The Massachusetts factory act further provides that "wherever manufacturing machinery is propelled by steam, suitable communication must be provided between each room where such machinery is placed and the engine room, in order to control the motive power in case of "ccidents." In New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Missouri, Pennsylvania and Ohio it is required that "all vats, pans and other structures containing molten metal or hot liquor be suitably protected."

The following brief list suffices to illustrate the perfectly preventable nature of the accidents by which people are killed and mutilated in Illinois, for want of the ordinary legislative safeguards provided in these other manufacturing States:

William Atkinson, boy employed by A. Wecker & Son, mattress-makers. 441 South Halsted street, had three fingers crushed in poorly protected "hair-picker" machine; amputation of fingers was necessary.

John Rudkowski, laborer, was caught by shafting, drawn into machinery and instantly killed, at Wells & French's foundry, Blue Island Avenue and Wood street.

William Keown, caught in shafting and whirled between floor and wall, was crushed to death, in engine room of the Anglo-American Packing Company, Union Stockyards.

Thomas Welch, oiler in malting works of Rice & Bullen, Cragin, was caught in the machinery and wound around a windlass until crushed to death.

Michael Kroner was fatally scalded by falling into a vat of boiling beer, works of the Cooke Brewing Co., foot of 27th street.

From the works of the Illinois Steel Company alone the papers report the following accidents, four of them fatal, and the fifth probably fatal: James J. Williams, railmaker, killed in the company's works at Archer and Ashland avenues, by explosion of steamchest, August 7, 1895.

Louis Ellstrom, employed in the same works. was crushed by freight elevator, and died of his injuries November 19th. The coroner's jury censured the company for failing to protect the elevator.

Frank Smith, or Fred Schmidt, employed in the South Chicago works, was fatally burned by explosion of blast furnace. Died while being taken to the hospital, November 21st.

Daniel Duffey, steelworker, killed in the same works, in the nightshift; crushed under a five-ton bucket, November 15th.

On the same night, Nicholas Zendry, moulder, in the works at Chicago Heights, fell upon a red-hot iron bar as it was passing through rollers, and the bar penetrated his abdomen. He was taken to the County hospital, where it was said his injuries must result in death.

All these victims were men, and therefore presumably able to rise a reasonable degree of caution for self-preservation, yet three of them were killed, and one fatally injured in one week, and no two of them from the same cause. The risks attending the work of adults in the employ of this company being such as are indicated by these facts, the dangers to which boys are exposed are naturally even greater, since children are never cautious. That the company is fully aware of the danger, is shown by its policy of requiring the following release from the parents of minors employed by it:

ILLINOIS STEEL COMPANY.

tion to the Illinois Steel Company to receive, upon the following terms, and continue in its employ the said.....at the ditions: I,parent, as aforesaid, fully recognize the hazardous nature of the employment in which my said son is about to engage and to continue in; but, nevertheless, I, the said parent, de-sire his employment as aforesaid in such departments and occupations as the said company may from time to time designate: and I hereby consent to such employment of said minor, and in consideration thereof and for the further consideration of one dollar to me in hand paid, the receipt whereof from said company I hereby acknowledge, I do hereby release and forever discharge the Illinois Steel Company of and from all claims and demands for loss of service of said.....minor,l (Seal.)

NOTE — The above release is in all cases to be executed by the father, if living, in the presence of two witnesses; if the father is dead, it is to be executed by the mother, and the fact of the death of the father must be noted across the face of the release in ink, as follows, to-wit: "Father is dead."

NOTE.—As soon as the above release is fully executed it is to be forwarded to the General Claim Department of the Illinois Steel Company, 1116 "The Rookery," Chicago.

The following is a specimen of the release used by railroad companies:

THE WABASH RAILROAD COMPANY.

MINOR'S EMPLOYMENT RELEASE.

Now, therefore, in consideration of said employment by the said The Wabash Railroad Company of the said....., minor, and in consideration of one dollar to us in hand paid, the receipt whereof we do hereby acknowledge, we do hereby release, quitclaim and forever discharge the said The Wabash Railroad Company of and from any and all liability for any injury he, the said......and agree that the time, salary or wages that may be due him for work or labor performed for the said The Wabash Railroad Company shall be entered to his credit and paid to him direct by the treasurer or paymaster of the said railroad company; and we do hereby authorize the payment to him or to his order of any and all amounts due him as aforesaid and agree that his receipt or order for the same shall be binding on us; and we do hereby release and discharge the said railroad company of and from any and all liability for the value of his services during the term of his minority. This release to be of full force and effect so long as the said railroad company, whether in the capacity herein first above recited or in any other capacity in which the said railroad company may use his services.

Witness:

.....

NOTE.—The above release is in all cases to be executed by both parents, if living, in the presence of two witnesses: if either parent is dead, it is to be executed by the survivor, and the fact of the death of one parent must be noted across the face of the release in ink, as follows, to-wit: "Father is dead."

NOTE:—As soon as the above release is fully executed it is to be forwarded to the General Claim Department of the Wabash Railroad Company.

The following is a copy of release on file with the Chicago Drop Forge & Foundry Co., doing business at Kensington, Cook county:

"We hereby certify that our son, Axel Swanson, was born on the 29th day of June, 1878; and that we consent to his employment at grinding, heating, carrying stock, and trimming, by the Drop Forge & Foundry Co.: and in consideration of such employment do hereby release said employers from any and all claims or demands that we either of us may have as pirents of said minor, growing out of any personal injury that may accrue to him while so employed.

E. W. SWANSON, MRS. SWANSON."

The use of the release frees the employer from the danger of civil damages consequent upon injury to employés. The State requires no safeguards or preventive measures of any kind. Killing children by machinery has not yet been made a crime in Illinois, and the State cannot prosecute where no legal offense has been committed. The fact that the release is a frequent accompaniment of the employment of children in dangerous occupations furnishes a powerful argument for extending the law by providing for safeguarding all employés, prohibiting the employment of children in dangerous occupations, and extending the child labor sections to embrace all children engaged in transportation and commerce.

THE COMPULSORY EDUCATION LAW.

The Compulsory Education law is published here, because its exact terms seem not to be widely known, and also because it interlocks so closely with the child labor provisions of the factory law that no report on the child labor found in this State would be complete, which did not give full weight to this intimate relation of the two laws and their enforcement.

COMPULSORY ATTENDANCE.

Requires that children between the ages of 7 and 14 years shall attend school at least 16 weeks in each year unless exempt.

§ 2. Penalties for violations of this act.

§ 8. Appointment of truant officers. Hearing of charges for non-attendance.

§ 4. Recovery of fines and penalties.

§ 5. Penalties for evasion of this act.

AN ACT concerning the education of children.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois represented in the General Assembly: That every person having control of any child between the ages of seven (7) and fourteen (14) years, shall annually cause such child to attend for at least sixteen (16) weeks, twelve weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, some public or private day school: Provided, that this act shall not apply in any case where the child has been or is being otherwise instructed for a like period of time in the elementary branches of education, or whose physical or mental condition renders his or her attendance impracticable or inexpedient, or who is excused for sufficient reasons by any competent court of record. § 2. For every willful neglect of such duty as prescribed by section one (1) of this act, the person so offending shall forfeit to the use of the public schools of the city, town or district in which such child resides, a sum not less than one dollar ($1) nor more than twenty dollars ($20), and costs of suit.

The board of education in cities, towns, villages and school dis-83. tricts, and the board of school directors in school districts may, at their discretion, appoint one or more proper persons, whose duty it shall be to report all violations of this act in writing to such board of education or board of directors, whose duty it shall be, when in their opinion the evidence renders such action necessary, to notify in writing the parent or guardian that such complaint has been made, and if cause be not shown within five (5) days, to at once proceed against the responsible person as is hereby provided. It shall also be the duty of said board of education in cities, towns, villages and school districts and boards of school directors in school districts, to appoint one of their number, who shall be a discreet and proper person, whose duty it shall be to hear excuses and reasons of parents or guardians for the non-attendance of children at school and to report in writing to said boards of education or boards of directors at the next regular or special meeting the names, ages and postoffice addresses of all persons prosecuted under the provisions of this The persons appointed as such officers shall be entitled to such act. compensation for services under this act as shall be determined by the boards appointing them, and which compensation shall be paid out of the distributable school fund.

§ 4. Any fine and penalty mentioned in this act may be sued for and recovered before any court of record or justice of the peace of the proper county in the name of the People of the State of Illinois for the use of the public schools of the city, town, village or district in which said child resides.

§ 5. Any person having control of a child, who, with intent to evade the provisions of this act, shall make a willful[ly] false statement concerning the age of such child or the time such child has attended school, shallofor such offense forfeit a sum of not less than $3 nor more than $20, for the use of public schools for such city, town, village or district.

APPROVED June 19, 1893.

It will be observed that the law requires but 16 weeks of school attendance, of which but 12 weeks need be consecutive. This leaves 36 weeks free in each year, during which parents and employers are subject to the temptation to put an idle child at work in violation of the factory law.

The enforcement of the meager provisions of the Compulsory Education law is left to the option of local authorities. The inequality which grows out of this option is well illustrated by the condition of the children in two manufacturing cities in opposite ends of the State. In Alton, in January, 1895, there were found (as is pointed out elsewhere in this report) 200 children under the age of 14 years, at work in a single establishment. Their employment was in direct violation of both the Compulsory Education law and the Factory act. The school board of Alton had not appointed a truant officer or made any attempt to enforce the compulsory education law.

In Freeport, on the other hand, where the school board makes continuous effort to keep the children in school, but 15 children, all boys, were found at work during this year, among 1,367 employés in 23 establishments, and no one of the boys was under 14/ years of age.

The attitude of the Board of Education of Chicago is illustrated by two passages from its report for the year ending June 28, 1895. In the course of his report to the Board, Dr. Bluthardt, Superintendent of Compulsory Education, says: "The work of the Compulsory Department, shown by the yearly report, places over 3,700 children in school; including many brought in for the first time, and truants who have dropped out from time to time. The same spirit has been carried out as in the past, and the only forces brought to bear have been persuasion and watchfulness—no cases of prosecution having been made." In the list of accepted excuses occur the following:

Indifference (parent's carelessness)	160 287
Working at home	262

With such excuses accepted by the Board of Education for the non-attendance of children of compulsory school age and without prosecution, the Factory Inspectors cannot hope to keep all the children under 14 years of age out of the factories and workshops.

In the same report, Mr. Albert G. Lane, Superintendent of Schools, says: "The fifteen truant agents, appointed by the Board of Education to visit different sections of the city and to notify parents of children who do not attend school that the law requires them to do so, have done the best they could under the existing conditions. The law is ineffective, because no penalty can be enforced. Some good is accomplished by serving notices upon parents that the children should attend school, but wherever parents are indifferent or deliberately keep their children from school no effort has been made to enforce the law."

The question naturally arises: How can the Board of Education know that no penalty can be enforced, when no case has ever been tried under the law and no judicial decision obtained?

It is, in part, by reason of the fact that "no effort has been made to enforce the law" by the Board of Education, that the inspectors of this department were, in 1895, under the disagreeable necessity of prosecuting 56 employers upon the charge of employing 80 children under the age of 14 years. Even where we order the discharge of the child, forward its name to the Board of Education, and prosecute the employer, we too often find the same child at work in a second or third shop, still under the required age. During the year, one boy was the cause of our prosecuting two different employers in less than two months. The parents of this boy were not prosecuted by the Board of Education, though they violated the Compulsory Education law every day that the boy worked.

It would strengthen the efforts of this department very much, if all the children were kept in school even the 16 weeks per annum which the law requires, and would remedy the injustice of holding the employer alone responsible, and letting the parent go unpunished, who certainly shares the moral responsibility and ought to be held to it under the Compulsory Education law.

So long as we are without a stringent Compulsory Education have and local boards able and willing to enforce it, we shall have children doing the work of men and women while they should be in school, and growing up unable to read and write, as we find children in the Illinois factories and workshops every day.

While the most helpless children are left unprotected by the non-enforcement of the Compulsory Education law, poverty-stricken parents and sordid employers will leave them in ignorance for the sake of the money which can be gained at the cost of the children. Nor can any effort of the factory inspectors, however faithful and painstaking, make good the wrong done the children.

We therefore again recommend that the prosecution of derelict parents be made mandatory upon local school boards, as the prosecution of manufacturers who employ children under 14 years of age is made mandatory upon the Factory Inspector, by Section 9 of the Factory law.

The failure of the local authorities to supply school accommodations for the children who are ready and willing to go to school aggravates the failure to enforce the compulsory attendance law in some places. This is conspicuously the case in Chicago and Alton. In Alton, while 200 children under 14 years of age were at work in the glass works, there were on the list of applicants for admission to the schools 240 children in excess of the seats provided. In Chicago the report of the Board of Education for 1895 (p. 42) shows that "the number of children in rented rooms at the close of the year 1894 was 9,661, and at the close of 1895 it was 11,674. The number of children in half day divisions at the close of 1894 was 14,086; at the close of 1895 it was 17,545." In addition to this, the latest school census of Chicago showed 6,887 children of school age who were attending no school whatever.

In a single ward of Chicago (the 19th) the seating capacity of the four public schools is 3,437, or 4,135 less than the number of children of school age (7,572), as shown by the school cersus of 1894. Thus less than 50 per cent. of the children of school age in this ward are provided with seats in the public schools. These children cannot overflow into the schools of adjacent wards, for these also lack adequate accommodations. This 19th ward, with the three wards adjoining to the south and west (the 7th, 8th and 9th), form a vast working people's district. The residents are chiefly Italians, Bohemians and Russian Jews, and among them are thousands of wage-earning children. These childen of immigrant toilers need the best educational facilities which any American city can provide, if they are to develop into useful citizens of value to the industrial life of their generation.

THE IGNORANCE OF WORKING CHILDREN.

The logical product of the educational policy of Illinois is the presence in the factories and workshops of a large body of ignorant and illiterate children.

Some of the children who come to this office to have age affidavits made, born in Chicago and brought up under the shadow of the public schools, cannot write their names, and many who can do this can write nothing else In general, it is true that children taken as witnesses from the stock yards, the sweat shops and the tenement house cigar shops, cannot write or read a simple sentence in the English language. In the course of the prosecutions carried on during the present year, children have been called as witnesses who, born in Chicago or brought here in infancy, yet cannot answer in English such simple questions, as "What is your name?" "Where do you live?" 'Do you know how old you are?" "What is the name of the firm you are working for?" Hence the evidence of the children is frequently taken through a Polish, Russian or Bohemian interpreter.

Such scenes as these cannot occur in Massachusetts and New York. In the former State, a valuable compulsory education law has been faithfully enforced for several years, and immigrant children over the compulsory school age, but under 16 years of age, are required to attend night school, if they work by day before they can read and write English. New York also has a compulsory school attendance law extending to the age of 16 years; and the New York factory law authorizes the inspectors to order the discharge of children between the ages of 14 and 16 years who cannot read and write simple English. Unfortunately, the Illinois factory law makes no educational qualification a condition precedent to the employment of children.

All the illiterate children ought to be turned out of the factories and workshops and into schools for purposes of instruction. But, besides this immediate purpose, there is another important point to be gained by requiring a certain grade of intelligence of all children before permitting them to go to work, viz.: the reinforcement of the age limit.

In order to enforce the prohibition of the employment of children under the age of 14 years, the statute requires that before any child goes to work, there must first be obtained and placed on file an affidavit made by the parent or guardian stating the name, date and place of birth of every child employed under the age of 16 years. This provision is intended to throw upon the parent, where it properly belongs, the responsibility for the statement, under oath, of the exact age of the child. In the case of intelligent and conscientious parents this provision works well, and enforced by prosecution of all manufacturers found employing children without affidavits, has done much to raise the standard of age and stature of the children employed in fac'ories and workshops conpared with those in mercantile occupations where the minimal age of work is not yet prescribed by law. But the provision breaks down in the case of the very children who need it most, the children of illiterate and degraded parents.

Many of the parents who come to this office to make affidavit to the age of their children do not definitely know the age; or, if they know it, they can, for lack of available birth records, falsify it without fear of detection. Many parents are ready to swear to any statement, to trust the notary to fill the blank in any way which will enable the child to go to work at once. This is true chiefly of the Italians, Poles, Russians and Bohemians, who still bring children, apparently not more than 10 or 11 years old, for Whenever there is reasonable doubt as to the age of affidavits. children, the parents are sent away with the affidavit unmade; but the first notary to whom they go after leaving the office usually fills the blank, and we have no authority to dispute its correctness, when we subsequently find it in a shop. Parents have sworn that children were 14 years of age, though the children themselves said they were but 11 or 12 years old; their small stature supported their assertion, and the records of the schools they left bear entries of statements previously made by the paren's which correspond with the claim of the children. Some warents deliberately state one age to the inspectors and another to the notary who makes the affidavit, and the sworn statement must be accepted in the absence of birth records by which it could be proved untrue. There is no way of going behind the parental oath. Thus it is precisely the most sordid and ignorant parents who now deprive their children of the protection of the age limit. and the affidavit clause.

The case of many of these children could be effectively covered by prohibiting the employment of any child under 16 years of age who cannot read and write simple English, for there is always a heavy degree of probability that illiterate children, when undersized, are under the legal age for work, even though they hold age affidavits made in due form.

Years ago it used to be urged that children might find in an apprenticeship, and in the skill acquired in mastering the various branches of a trade, compensation for the loss of school life. If there was ever any force in this argument, it must have been in the days when schools were less valuable than they now are, and before the introduction of machinery had so far reduced the demand for skill in the industrial world.

Skill in our day is losing its commercial value; even in the printing trades, almost its last stronghold, the linotype is under mining men and driving them in large numbers into other occupations. The need of to-day is not skill, so much as the power to acquire it. The qualities demanded of the young working man are character, judgment, versatility, so that when he is superseded by a machine, he can turn his faculties to account in acquiring the knack to which machinery is fast reducing almost all factory work. He who can turn trained faculties to new tasks, as the progress of invention routs him from place after place, is the only man who is entitled to contemplate with equanimity the incoming century. Women are displacing men, and children women; new machines are displacing all three. However true it may be that each displacement finds ultimate compensation, the immediate effect, at every stage, is disaster to all who are not versatile; the less character and readiness of resource the worker possesses, the more disastrous the immediate personal result.

This is the horror overhanging the future of the factory child of to day. All the training acquired by children in the labor market is in the direction of mechanical and brainless routine work. Outside of a very few surviving skilled trades there is no longer any real apprentice system. The child who wraps caramels a fortnight before Christmas, carries uppers a month in a shoe factory, delivers telegrams a season, drifts to the stock yards for a few weeks' bone-cutting at a buzz saw (fortunate if he escape without the loss of a finger or a hand), stamps forks or cancovers in the din of the can-factory, acquires no real trade skill or knowledge. Working in half a dozen branches of industry in as many months, the child is the worse for every change, because he is taught by this experience that cheapness is the one quality desired, instability a matter of course, and added size, strength and skill, if accompanied with the demand for added pay, a reason for discharge.

The Illinois factory child, trained neither in the school room nor in the workshop, promises to be little more in coming maturity than an addition to the mass of wretched, helpless, unskilled labor which composes the "submerged tenth."

CHILDREN IN MERCANTILE OCCUPATIONS.

It is probable that there are as many children under 16 years of age engaged in other gainful occupations in Chicago, as are employed in factories and workshops. No trustworthy census of them has ever been made, but their number certainly mounts into the thousands. More than 1,500 girls under 16 years of age are known to be employed in the retail stores in the first ward alone, and to these must be added the children working in other stores, the newsboys and girls, the bootblacks, peddlers, telegraph and messenger boys, the office boys and those who run elevators.

None of these children are subject to any legislative restriction as to age, intelligence, hours of labor, or school attendance. The compulsory school law is not enforced and is not effective; the factory law does not extend to them. The section of the criminal code which prohibits the employment of children at dangerous occupations does not make it the duty of any officer of the State to enforce its provisions, and it is therefore inoperative.

One consequence of this failure to restrict the street life of children through the crucial years of childhood (and it must be borne in mind that, in some of the occupations enumerated, work begins when the child is 5 or 6 years old) is, that in Cook county, the great industrial center of the State, the brilewell and the reform schools are crowded with children who have been tempted, in the course of their street life, into all manner of offences, from throwing stones through plate-glass windows to picking pockets.

It is now a recognized duty of the State to provide great schools for delinquent children, where training is afforded in the hope of turning them from evil courses. It has not yet become so well accepted, though it is quite as imperative, that the State must not neglect the children who are earning their living in the streets. These also threaten the public safety and order, for they are so destitute of safeguards which the State alone can afford, that the young criminals are largely recruited from their ranks.

The duty of extending to all children thrust out into the world to earn a livelihood, the same protection which the factory law now affords to the children in the workshops and factories, should not need urging. Surely the age of 14 years is early enough for any child to begin work at any of these occupations. The danger to life, to limb, to health, to morals, varies with the varying occupations, but none of them can be taken up by a child under 14 years of age without the likelihool of permanent injury to the child.

The fact that the hours of labor are unrestricted adds greatly to the danger of all these occupations. The newsboys and girls, the bootblacks and peddlers, who are on the streets until after midnight, see and hear that which makes them wise only in sin. The cash girl is protected from this until she starts homeward after her evening's work, but the long hours of her occupation inflict a grave physical injury. So seriously are the little cash girls hurt by the standing and running demanded of them throughout long hours, that physicians find many of them suffering from diseases rare in childhood, but common to over-worked women.

In the best retail stores, the pneumatic tube is taking the place of cash children. A change in the opposite direction is, however, observed in certain large department stores where small girls are employed in selling some of the cheapest articles. As these articles are almost always in the basement of the store, the child is injured not only by standing all day, but by the strain upon the eyes from electric lights, and by heated, heavy air.

The manifest need of legislation regulating the age and hours of employment of children in mercantile occupations is not everywhere a matter of future action. The factory laws of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania already include such children. Similar regulation would be welcomed by the great body of Illinois merchants, who look with little favor upon profits of unscrupulous competitors secured by methods which they are themselves too high minded to adopt, such as the exploitation of children.

/ Although the 39th General Assembly failed to pass the bill for the protection of children engaged in mercantile occupations, no subject has been more generally discussed in public meetings in Illinois, during the past two years, than the need of such a law, and the sentiment supporting it has been almost unanimous. There is reason to hope that the next General Assembly may embody this public opinion in such measures for the protection of all the working children as have been adopted by other States.

The prohibition of employment under 14 years of age, now limited to the factory children, should be extended to children in all gainful occupations.

The requirements as to education, health, safety of life and limb, which are asked for the factory children, should be secured to all wage-earning children. There should be, in addition to the foregoing, certain restrictions placed upon the running of elevators, providing that the care of an elevator should never be entrusted to a boy under 18 years of age, and that no minor should be permitted to operate an elevator the speed of which is above 200 feet per minute.

FARTHER LEGISLATION FOR CHILDREN.

There is nothing in the nature of the industries of Illinois which calls for the employment of young children. The glass companies have now discovered that the smalle t boys can be replaced by a simple technical improvement, without injury to the work of the adults. The old claim that cotton and silk workers begin early to acquire skill of wrist and fingers for must their occupation, carries no weight in Illinois, where (with the exception of the Aurora Cotton Mills, employing rather over 100 children, and a few cotton and woolen mills scattered through the State), there is virtually no textile industry. The very distribution of the children shows that it is not a matter of adaptability of little kands to delicate tasks. The cheapness of their labor alone can explain the presence of children at the Stock Yards of Chicago. What could be less suited to the capacities of boyhood than splitting bones at an unguarded buzz saw? What more inappropriate for girls of 10 and 12 years than sorting and marking soiled linen in steaming basement laundries twenty hours at a stretch? Or for girls of 14 to 16, than running heavy foot-power sewing machines? It is no qualification of skill or speed which makes these children eligible for such employment.

Such unfit and unnecessary work of children is stunting in mind and body several thousand boys and girls who are growing up illiterate, over worked, and in such conditions that they must, in time, become a burden upon the community whose neglect is permitting the sacrifice of their childhood; to the greed of profit of a relatively small number of employers.

The child labor provisions of the law were enacted in recognition of this danger to the children and the State. Viewed as an initial massure the law is of great value, not only because it interferes with the employment of the youngest children, but also because, by providing for an actual count of children at work and for separating by the oath of the parents those over 14 years of age from the children under that age, it has afforded a basis of trustworthy information upon which to build up a code as valuable and that of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts, or, best of all, New York.

After all deductions have been made from the face value of the child labor provisions, the fact remains that because of it the number of children under 14 years of age in the factories and workshops diminishes steadily (in spite of some perjury by parents and some unscrupulousness of notaries and physicians), and the tendency in the better sort of factories is to prefer children over 15 to those just 14 years old.

With the exception of the breakdown of the health-certificate clause by reason of the reckless issuance of certificates by physicians, the claim may justly be made that in general the child labor provisions are doing the work for which they were intended. Although the results obtained are far less than the condition of the wage-earning boys and girls of Illinois demands, the first long step in the right direction has been taken, and it is only in comparison with the codes of older States that the Illinois statute seems to be merely a feeble beginning.

At the regular session of the legislature of 1895 a bill embodying the provisions most urgently needed to improve the condition of the working children was introduced by Mr. Steen and Senator Mussett. It failed, however, to reach third reading in either House. At the special session a similar bill was introduced in the House by Colonel Charles Page Bryan and, upon its failure to pass, a commission was appointed, with Colonel Bryan as chairman, to investigate the condition of the working children and report to the next legislature.

The points which it seems especially necessary to cover by immediate legislation will be found at the close of the text of this report under the title Recommendations.

TENEMENT HOUSE MANUFACTURE.

The following are the sections of the factory act which relate to tenement house manufacture in Illinois:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That no room or rooms, apartment or apartments, in any tenement or dwelling house used for eating or sleeping purposes, shall be used for the manufacture, in whole or in part, of coats. vests, trousers, knee-pants, overalls, cloaks, shirts, ladies' waists, purses, feathers, artificial flowers or cigars, except by the immediate members of the family living therein. Every such workshop shall be kept in a cleanly state, and shall be subject to the provisions of this act; and each of said articles made, altered, repaired or finished in any such workshops shall be subject to inspection and examination, as hereinafter provided, for the purpose of ascertaining whether said articles, or any of them, or any part thereof, are in a cleanly condition and free from vermin and any matter of an infectious and contagious nature; and every person so occupying or having control of any workshop as aforesaid shall within fourteen days from the taking effect of this act, or from the time of beginning of work in any workshop as aforesaid, notify the board of health of the location of such workshop, the nature of the work there carried on, and the number of persons therein employed.

Sec. 2. If the board of health of any city or said State Inspector finds evidence of infectious or contagious diseases present in any workshop, or in goods manufactured or in process of manufacture therein, and if said board or inspector shall find said shop in an unhealthy condition, or the clothing and materials used therein to be unfit for use, said board or inspector shall issue such order or orders as the public health may require, and the board of health are hereby enjoined to condemn and destroy all such infectious and contagious articles.

Sec. 7. The words "manufacturing establishment," "factory" or "work shop." wherever used in this act, shall be construed to mean any place where goods or products are manufactured or repaired, cleaned or sorted, in whole or in part, for sale, or for wages. Whenever any house, room or place is used for the purpose of carrying on any process of making, altering, repairing or finishing for sale, or for wages, any coats, vests, trousers, knee-pants, overalls, cloaks, shirts, ladies' waists, purses, feathers, artificial flowers or cigars, or any wearing apparel of any kind whatsoever, intended for sale, it shall, within the meaning of this act, be deemed a workshop for the purpose of inspection. And it shall be the duty of every person, firm or corporation to keep a complete list of all such workshops in his, their or its employ, and such list shall be produced for inspection on demand by the board of health or any of the officers thereof, or by the State Inspector, Assistant Inspector, or any of the deputies appointed under this act.

These provisions aim to regulate tenement house manufacture, and to modify some of its evils, while recognizing and maintaining the system. This method is pursued in all other States which deal with the system by legislation. Laden with danger to the public as tenement house manufacture is, and unnecessary as it is, there has not yet been made any attempt to prohibit it in any State, although the system is everywhere growing and spreading in the face of regulation. Legislative restriction rests upon the theory of regulation by registration and such constant sanitary supervision of the shops as, it was believed, registration would make possible. The theory is disproved by two and a half years' faithful endeavor to apply it.

Tenement house manufacture in this State is confined chiefly to Chicago, and to the making of bread, cigars and garments. Within this limit it is very extensive, and as the tables of this report show, is increasing rapidly. Nearly all the sigar shops are in tenement houses, bakeries in cellars of tenement houses are common, and a very large majority of the garment shops are either in tenement houses or upon tenement house premises, over stable or shed, in basement or cellar, in upper floor living rooms. The provisions of the Illinois statute are especially intended to regulate the garment trade; yet in the tenement house shops, in 1895, this trade reached greater dimensions than ever before. There were more shops, more employés, more children among the employés; a larger trade in every way.

During the year there were inspected in Chicago 1,923 places in which garments were manufactured, employing 9,122 men, 13,832 women, 1,832 children, a total of 24,786. Only 208 of these 1,923 places are factories, and in the factories were employed only 3,305 men, 6,052 women, 525 children, a total of 9,882. All articles of wearing apparel, from hats to shoes, are included in the garment trades. An analysis of the table upon these trades (see Appendix B) shows that, of the 208 factories, only 18 are cloak and clothing factories. They are divided as follows: Cloaks, 10, employing 932 persons; ready-made clothing, 5, employing 424 persons; custom clothing, 3, employing 65 persons.

Contrast with this meagre showing of 18 factories employing 1,421 persons in the cloak and clothing trades, 1,715 contractors' or "outside" shops, employing 14,904 persons. The exact figures for the cloak and clothing manufacture in Chicago, in 1895, as shown in the tables, are:

	Number of places.	NUMBER EMPLOYED.
		Men.	Women.	Children.	Total.
Factories	18	545	822	44	1,421
Contractors' shops	1,715	5,817	7,780	1,307	14,904

The shop of the contractor, commonly known as the "sweater" shop, is usually on tenement house premises, as is shown in the tables at the close of this chapter, and in Appendix C. The increase in the number of these shops, and the number of persons employed in them during the last three years, shows how rapidly tenement house manufacture is growing in Chicago. The figures for the three years are:

Year.	Shops.	Men.	Women.	Children.	Total.
	1,413	5,817 4,469 2,611	7,780 5,912 8,617	1,307 721 595	14,904 11,102 6,828

The law does not prohibit the keeping of a workshop in a tenement house. It only prohibits the use of living rooms in a tenement house for the purpose of manufacture by persons not members of the family dwelling therein, and expressly exempts members of the family from this prohibition. Any rooms not used for living purposes, though in a tenement house, may be used for a shop by a contractor, and he may employ therein as many persons as he can pack into the room or rooms.

Of the 542 violations of the statute successfully prosecuted in 1895, only 33 were violations of the statutory requirement that no person not a member of the immediate family shall be employed where eating and sleeping is done. Of these home shops, 9 were cigar shops and 24 were garment shops; there were 32 defendants, one sweater having been twice prosecuted for the same offense.

The small number of these prosecutions does not mean that strict enforcement of sections 1 and 7 of the law has accomplished the removal of the shops from tenement houses. On the contrary, there were never so many shops in tenement houses in Chicago as in 1895. It only means that fewer persons were hired to work with the contractor and his family in their living rooms, generally consisting of bedroom and kitchen. The tables for the cloak aud clothing trades, at the close of this chapter, show how many shops are on tenement house premises, and how crowded with families are these premises.

The law requires that all shops in living rooms shall be kept clean and free from vermin and infection, although the provisions of the law are not adequate for the enforcement of thes requirements; but there are no more regulations prescribed for a shop in a tenement house, outside of living rooms, than there are for the most sanitary factory. The tenement house shop may be, without violating the law, over a stable; in the garret of a building teeming with a filthy colony of tenants; in a basement so low, damp and dark that its walls drip slime. It may be so located that its employés must use halls and stairways, water supply, vault or closet, in common with tenants of all ages, in all manuer of physical condition. The factory law does not empower the inspector to order changes in any of these foul and dangerous conditions.

That portion of the Illinois statute which prohibits manufacture in living rooms by persons not members of the immediate family dwelling therein, enumerates specifically those articles to which the prohibition extends. These are coats, pants, vests, shirts, overalls, cloaks, ladies' waists, purses, feathers, artificial flowers and cigars. Articles found in process of manufacture in living rooms of tenement houses, but not included in the enumeration, are gloves, mittens, underwear, hats, caps, boots, shoes, gaiters and neckwear. In the enforcement of the law confusion arises from this failure to bring under the statute all the articles made in tenement houses. For instance, a sweater in the third floor living rooms of a tenement house cannot be made to understand that he is subject to prosecution for employing men and women to make trousers in the rooms where his family eat and sleep, while a glovemaker does the same thing unpunished on the floor below, and a capmaker on the floor above. This omission of a number of articles of apparel from a list in which others are specifically enumerated seems to have been unintentional on the part of the framers of the present statute.

A most serious omission from the list of specified articles is food. Bread is constantly made in the cellars of tenement houses. and a part of the employés habitually sleep in the cellars where the work is done, under the most revolting conditions. Much of the candy sold upon the streets is made by the men who peddle in the rooms where they sleep at night; the condition of it. which can only be realized by one who has visited them. The cheaper grades of candy sold in the stores are frequently supplied from the same source. Pickles, jellies and preserves are made in living rooms in filthy basements. In bakeries, candy shops, pickle, preserve and jelly factories, in all places in which foods are prepared, no provisions of the factory law apply except the childlabor sections.

The law deals with three sets of persons engaged in tenement house manufacture; the wholesaler who gives out work, the contractor or tailor who receives it, and the home finisher employed by the contractor.

All that the law requires of the wholesaler is, that he shall keep a complete list of all shops in his employ, and shall pr duce the list upon demand of an inspector. When he has met these requirements, he is within the law, even though his goods are being made up in tenement house shops in which every clause of the law is broken. For the law recognizes as responsible for the condition under which manufacture is carried on, not the wholesaler who owns the stock and the completed garments, but In law, the contractor is not the agent of the the contractor. manufacturer, and there is, therefore, at present no way of placing upon the wholesaler any legal responsibility for the spread of infection if his goods are made up, with his knowledge, in infected shops. Even where goods are burned, under section 2 of the law, it is the contractor who in the end must bear the loss (there would be no more work in Chicago for one who failed to do this). Nor can a wholesaler be reached when a contractor in his employ, placed under arrest for violating the factory law, jumps his bail and leaves the State. The wholesaler usually complies with the provision of the statute which requires him to keep and produce for the inspector a list of the contractors in his employ. For 1895, such lists were furnished by 11 cloak manufacturers, 48 manufacturers of ready-made clothing, and 184 manufacturers of custommade clothing. The inspections based upon these lists furnished the data concerning the 1,715 shops described in the tables of this report.

Very different is the manner in which the contractor is dealt with by the provisions of the law. He also is required to keep a list of all the shops in his employ and produce it on demand; but first he must himself register. The contractor is required to notify the Board of Health within two weeks of opening his shop, and to register every time he changes his address. He is required to separate his shop from his dwelling, and to keep it clean and free from vermin. He is required to refrain from employing any outsider in his kitchen and bedroom. Not only does he share, with all other employers, the liability to a penalty for violation of the child labor sections of the law, but he is in danger of having goods found upon his premises seized and burned, if there is infection or vermin discovered there. Upon him alone falls the burden of the attempt to regulate tenement house manufacture, although he is but one of the parties engaged in it and by no means the one who most profits by it.

It is in dealing with the contractor that the attempt to regulate tenement house manufacture most conspicuously breaks down. No contractor ever voluntarily registers with the Board of Health. Ouly when the city inspector, intent upon collecting the license fee, hunts him up, does his address become known to the Board of Health. Many contractors can neither read nor write, and can therefore keep no list of their home finishers. Even where such a list is kept, it is usually worthless, for the contractor frequently can not speak English nor understand the language of his immigrant finisher. The Italian finisher, for instance, usually works for a Russian Jew. Each possesses a few words of English and they are able to transfer the work and the pittance which pays for it; but their conversation ends here.

The home finishers are the third class of people dealt with in the attempt to regulate tenement house manufacture. They, also, are required to register with the Board of Health; but in no case known to the inspectors has a home finisher ever registered. Nor have the inspectors ever attempted to compel them, by prosecution, to comply with the requirement. So vast is their number, and so precarious their work; so hopeless is it to make them stable members of the body industrial, that the attempt has never been made in any State, to carry into court, for failing to register, these poorest of poor women of the great cities. Thousands of home finishers have been found by the inspectors, and hundreds of their addresses are always on the files of this office. Yet so often do they change, so readily and constantly do they throw aside their work, that it is impossible, in the absence of the lists which the contractors are required to keep, but do not keep, to estimate how many women are employed at any time at finishing, or where they are living.

It follows that no valid assurance can at any time be given that preventable contagious disease is not going out daily, and spreading abroad throughout the community in garments finished in these homes.

The table of places in which custom clothing was made in 1895. according to the lists furnished by 184 merchant tailors, shows that many of them are shops with a considerable number of em. ployés; on premises in all ways like those on which ready-made clothing is made; i. e., tenement house premises. A great deal of custom tailor work is, however, given out to individual men and women, to be made in what are known in the trade as "back shops," and in the living rooms of the tailors. The back shop is a room rented by a number of working tailors, who pay rent together, but work each for himself, often each for a different merchant tailor. These shops are to be commended when they are in buildings not used for dwelling purposes, but they are frequently in tenement houses and sometimes over stables. The kitchen shop of the individual tailor is clean if his home is clean. and is usually free from the dangers that accompany over-crowd-The chief evil attending these shops is that they are ing. scattered, and this isolation of the tailor destroys all hope of adequate inspection. The number of tailors thus employed is so great that no body of inspectors can know, day by day, whether their workshops are free from contagious disease.

That part of the garment manufacture of Illinois which is carried on in the 208 factories in Chicago can be kept under supervision as easily and effectively as any other process of manufacture. It is not impossible to give some supervision to the 1,715 contractors' shops, and to follow them as they move from place to place, although they shift about so rapidly that, by the end of another year 25 per cent. of them will have been located in new quarters, and another 25 per cent. will have been lost. The records of this office show that, in two and a half years, 254 tailors and clothing contractors on the North Side and in the First Ward of the city have dropped out of sight; and the disappearances from the "sweater" colonies in the southwest and northwest sections of the city have numbered 531.

It is clear, however, that even the 1,715 contractors' shops now known to us, cannot be inspected often enough to render it safe for the public to purchase goods made up in them, while they are kept on premises where poverty continually breeds disease; and though any one given shop may be wholesome enough, yet no goods can be guaranteed non-infectious which have passed through it to the rooms of the poverty-stricken home finisher. Here, in the lowest depth of the conditions which tenement house manufacture fosters, lurks a danger to the community which no regulation can eradicate. From this danger nothing short of prohibition can protect the purchaser.

Tenement house manufacture is rapidly spreading in Chicago and entering a large variety of industries. Wherever the system enters, the trade becomes a sweated trade, carried on in the worst and most unwholesome premises, because it falls into the hands of the very poor. An interesting illustration is afforded by a recent innovation in mattress making. The tick cover of the mattress has long been an article of tenement house manufacture. The tufts (pieces of leather with which mattresses are tacked) are now cut in living rooms in tenement houses. The leather is bought in scraps from saddlery and shoe factories; the tufts are sold to upholsterers. The work of cutting tufts is done by hand, the leather scrap being laid on a block or other solid substance, and cut by a mallet stroke upon a die, one tuft at a time. The strain of the work is so severe, that the cutter's wrist is always swollen. Tufts of fine leather sell for 35 cents a pound, and it takes 20,000 to make a pound. Those made of heavy coarse leather sell as low as 9 cents a pound. Three pounds are the most that an active man can cut in a day of ten hours. Scrap leather costs $35 a ton, and the buyer must be something of a capitalist to get the stock; as those who cell it will not dispose of a few pounds at a Consequently the man who works at tuft making, if he can time. not buy his stock, falls into the hands of middleman or sweater, and cuts for him at 3 cents a pound, making a day's wage of 9 The home of this man, which is also his workshop, can cents. scarcely be in a condition to guarantee the clean and non-infectious state of the mattress for which he has cut the tufts. In this direction tends all tenement house manufacture.

HEALTH OF EMPLOYES.

The tenement house sweatshops employ more women than are found in any other branch of manufacture, one-fourth of all the women engaged in manufacture in the State being at work in these shops in Chicago. Of the whole number of employés in the sweatshops, nearly two to one are women and children, the actual numbers being 9,037 of them to 5,817 males over sixteen years of age. The children of both sexes number 1,307, and the females over 16 years number 7,780, of whom fully 75 per cent. are between 16 and 20 years.

These children and young girls, the most helpless of the working class, the least able to insist upon wholesome conditions of work, are found suffering from the worst surroundings. Young backs grow crooked more easily than older ones; young girls are browbeaten and overworked more unresistingly than older ones; young eyes and lungs are more sensitive to the fluff and dust disengaged from cheap-dyed woolen goods and scattered in the air by the flying needles of heavy machines. The poison gases from ill-flushed closets and family sinks in shops, the heat from the pressers' iron and the fumes from his charcoal or gasoline, affect the immature girl more quickly than the adult; tender membranes succumb more easily to the irritation of bad and damp air in basement shops.

Worst of all for the worker's health is the exhaustion which follows piece work done at foot-power machines, driven at high speed, through unlimited hours. During the rush season, there is literally no limit to the hours of labor save that set by utter physical exhaustion; the sweater does not go to bed at night, but throws himself upon the floor or cot to sleep an hour at a time when he can no longer stand; men and women work at the machines until they fall asleep over them, and in some cases until they faint from exhaustion. The working day of fourteen hours is the rule, and only the most tenacious workers are found worth the room they occupy, when the season is at its height. Older employés are crowded out because they cannot keep up the pace, and in this trade men are old at 35. The trade life of the sweatshop worker is probably shorter than that of men in any other occupation; and consumption, either of the lung or intestine, is their characteristic malady.

Shops over sheds or stables, in basements or on upper floors of of tenement houses, are not fit working places for men, women and children.

Most of the places designated in this report as basements are low-ceiled, ill-lighted, unventilated rooms, below the street level; damp and cold in winter, hot and close in summer; foul at all times by reason of adjacent vaults or defective sewer connections. The term cellar would more accurately describe these shops. Their dampness entails rheumatism and their darkness injures the sight of the people who work in them. They never afford proper accommodations for the pressers, the fumes of whose gasoline stoves and charcoal heaters mingle with the mouldy smell of the walls and the stuffiness always found where a number of the very poor are crowded together.

In shops over sheds or stables the operatives receive from below the stench from the vaults or the accumulated stable refuse; from the rear, the effluvia of the garbage boxes and manure bins in the filthy, unpaved alleys; and from the front, the varied stenches of the tonement house yard, the dumping ground for all the families residing on the premises.

Shops on upper floors have no proper ventilation; are reached by narrow and filthy halls and unlighted wooden stairways; are cold in winter unless all fresh air is shut out, and hot in summer. If in old houses, they afford no sanitary arrangements beyond the vaults used by all tenants; if in modern tenements the drains are out of order, water for the closets does not rise to upper floors, and poisonous gases fill the shops. This defective water supply, the absence of fire escapes, and the presence of the pressers' stove greatly aggravate the danger of death by fire.

Shops on the middle floors are ill-lighted, ill-ventilated, and share the smells from the kitchens and drains of surrounding living rooms.

The group of workers in each shop is so small that they can take no effective measures for their own protection against long hours and bad sanitary conditions. Whatever is to be done to ameliorate these conditions must be done by legislation in the interest, not of the large body of garment workers only, but of the public health.

THE PURCHASER'S RISK.

With 15,000 garment workers employed in sweaters' shops, conditions such as these become a matter of public concern.

A shop in a crowded tenement house gathers together men, women and children from other tenement houses where disease is likely to be, and throws them into direct contact with the tenants of the building in which the shop is, and in which there is always liability of contagious disease owing both to the great number of tenants, and to the character of the houses selected for the purpose. The risk of sending out infectious garments to the purchasing public is thus enormously increased. This dauger of infection in garments made up in tenement houses is an allpervading, unavoidable danger, as it has been the duty of the inspectors to point out in each report.

The tables upon which these reports are based show, from year to year, the error of the belief that manufacturers of standing have no goods made up in these shops. They show that the risk run by the purchaser of a costly cloak or a custom-made suit is precisely the risk run by the working man buying a cheap, readymade suit and by the poor woman who gets from a bargain counter knee pants for her boy; that in the cloak trade, the clothing trade, the merchant tailor's custom trade, though the manufacturer or merchant tailor may have shops in good sanitary condition, nothing of his manufacture can be guaranteed non-infectious so long as the greater part, or any part of his work is done on tenement house premises. While any of his goods are made up in tenement house sweat shops, all the garments which he offers for sale must share the reproach and the suspicion which attach to tenement house manufacture.

So long as this form of manufacture is tolerated, it remains the duty of the inspectors to point out that the unsanitary condition of many of these tenement houses, and the ignorance and abject poverty of the tenants, insure the maximum probability of the presence of disease; while the spread of infectious disease to the workers in the shop is facilitated by the swarming of the children everywhere, and the universal failure to isolate patients. Consumption, now recognized throughout the medical profession as one of the most infectious of diseases, almost inevitably carried in garments made by persons suffering from phthisis, is the characteristic disease of the sweatshop worker. Diptheria, small-pox, typhoid, scarlet fever, scabias and worse forms of skin disease are found in alarming proximity to garments in process of making. No vigilance can insure the inspector prompt knowledge of the presence of disease in these houses and shops.

The city ordinance, indeed, requires the physician in attendance upon any case of infectious or contagious disease to report the same to the Board of Health, and section 2 of the Factory Law enjoins the Board of Health to destroy all clothing made under infectious or contagious conditions. But physicians cannot report to the Board of Health what they do not know, and in many cases among the very poor a physician is called in only when death is imminent, to save the annoyance of a coroner's inquest. Meanwhile infectious clothing may have been finished and sent out for weeks before the danger was known to any one.

These risks cannot be effectively diminished while tenement house manufacture remains. The contractor's profit is too slight to warrant his seeking better quarters, and in these shops electrical or steam power is out of the question, while the foot power machine is the especial curse of the sweater's victim and the prime source of his consumption, which he inevitably spreads abroad through the community.

The dangers of the shop are much increased by the circumstance that garment-making is a season trade. The making of cloaks, ready-made clothing and custom garments of all kinds ceases practically for several months of every year. When the season is "on" it is short and very intense; there is work in all the shops at once, and a demand for employes which brings about an access of undesirable conditions. New people open shops who were nover contractors before, and know nothing of the requirements of the law. Poor men, who cannot afford a shop, rent half a dozen machines, set them up in kitchen and bedroom, and hire neighbors who run the machines and carry home garments to be finished by wives and children. During the season no staff of inspectors could cover all the shops often enough to prevent violations of the law or give assurance that no infectious disease is in the shops where garments are being made. These risks are inherent in the system of tenement house manufacture.

The sanitary value of the concentration of the garment workers in factories which could be permanently located and successfully inspected is wholly beyond computation, even in ordinary times when there is no epidemic. This consideration alone would, in the opinion of the inspectors, justify the prohibition of tenement house manufacture as a strictly sanitary measure. Until this is done, and tenement house manufacture abolished, purchasers must continue to take their chances of infection.

A system of manufacture which places all the cost of the plant upon the poorest and most irresponsible part of the trade (as the system of tenement house manufacture does by requiring the contractor to furnish the shop and supply heat, light and machinery), dooms the trade subjected to it to stagnation and degradation.

Child labor in the sweatshops grows out of all proportion to the growth of adult labor in the same shops and out of all proportion to the growth of child labor in the State, not because children are especially adapted to the work (far from it), but because the contractors cannot afford to increase the supply of adult labor. Shops in tenement houses are worse than shops elsewhere, because the contractors, the most poverty-stricken of employers, have to bear a burden (the cost of rent, heat, light and machines) borne as a matter of course in other trades by the manufacturer who owns or rents the factory and openly carries on the business. The contractors cannot afford to put in steam or electrical power; they cannot afford to invest capital for the improvement of machinery, and the consequence is that whatever cheapness is achieved under the sweating system is obtained at the cost of the employés and at the risk of health and life of the purchasing public.

The ineffectiveness of the law is in the scheme of regulation, involving, as it does, the continuance of the present system of manufacture and the placing of the responsibility upon the contractors, who are in all respects irresponsible, instead of placing it upon the wholesalers, who are in all respects responsible. The wholesalers, whom the law so lightly burdens, are stable and can be readily found; they are known to the whole community. If they were made responsible in law, as they are in fact, for the conditions under which their work is done, there would be no difficulty in enforcing the provisions of the law; as there is no difficulty, to day, in enforcing the child labor provisions upon responsible firms who employ children. No law can really place the garment trades upon the same level as other trades in the industrial world, which does not place the legal responsibility where the financial responsibility is, with the manufacturer. The statute now vainly attempts to place the legal responsibility on the contractors, who are unable to conduct their workshops upon a level of sanitation free from danger to the purchasing public or to the people employed in the shops.

The fundamental error in every State law hitherto enacted to regulate the sweating system is the failure to throw the responsibility for the conditions under which work is carried on upon the wholesale manufacturers.

It is sometimes urged in defense of tenement house manufacture, that it affords cheaper garments than could be produced in any other way. This is a mere assertion, which cannot be proved until an experiment has been made in manufacture upon a large scale and in factories equipped with electricity or steam. Certainly in all other branches of industry cheapness has kept pace with the improvement of the plant and the increasing magnitude of the scale of production. But even if the assertion were true, the cheapness of the garments would be a poor compensation to the Nation for the continuous dissemination of disease, and the degradation of an industry employing tens of thousands of people. The only other argument which is occasionally advanced in defense of the system of tenement house manufacture is, thet it gives work to widows in their homes, and thus enables them to keep their children about them. Even if the widows in question earned a sufficient living for themselves and their children, the price paid for their prosperity, at the risk of the community, might be deemed exorbitant. It is, however, a fact that no tenement house garment maker earns a sufficient living for a family; least of all the widow whose house work and care of her children interrupt her sewing, and whose very necessities are exploited by the sweater in his doling out of her work and pay. The widow in her tenement room remains a pauper in spite of her best efforts; and its unhealthful surroundings make her one of the most dangerous links in the chain of evils involved in this whole system.

There is no more reason for manufacture in tenement houses than there is for keeping cows there, a practice formerly common but now prohibited by reason of the changed condition of city There is no reason in Chicago, or in any Illinois city, for a life. bakery in a cellar. There is no reason for placing workshops in the midst of living rooms, in the most crowded tenement houses in the city. The custom is a survival of the old fashioned house industries. It is possible only in those trades in which there is no plant, no highly developed machinery; but it is not inevitable even in these. It is certainly not inevitable that the cities of Illinois should repeat the experience which the purely local, geographical features of Manhattan Island have entailed upon New York City. Even less excuse can be found for Chicago than for her great competitor, whose island boundaries explain the concentration of manufacture in crowded tenement houses. For similar conditions in any city on the prairies of Illinois, there can be no excuse.

It cannot be too much emphasized that the difficulties in the way of successful regulation of tenement house manufacture are insuperable difficulties, by reason of the vast number of the shops and the shifting about of the workers. They are here today and gone tomorrow. It has been the chief occupation of a faithful and skilled inspector for two years to obtain lists of addresses of garment workers, but these lists require daily revision to keep them even approximately correct. After another year's experience the inspectors can only repeat, with renewed emphasis, the warning that half-way measures are extremely dangerous, because they lull the purchasing public into a false sense of security. To continue the toleration of manufacture in tenement houses, in the face of the epidemic of 1894, would argue the people of Illinois incapable of learning from experience. Every garment "season" shows anew the hopelessness of the attempt to protect the public health from dangers which are inherent in tenement manufacture and can be removed only by its abolition.

Since the epidemic of small-pox in Chicago, the impossibility of enforcing sanitary regulations in 25,000 workrooms is generally recognized. The point to aim at now, however, is not, as was attempted in the statute of 1893, the regulation of certain branches of garment manufacture alone, but the prohibition of the tenement house manufacture of candy, bread, butter, cigars and all varieties of garments, including shoes. A sweeping prohibition of tenement house manufacture would go far to place the sweater's victims upon the same level of industrial surroundings as the workers in the factory trades. A law prohibiting the manufacture for sale of any article whatsoever in any tenement house would be a boon to thousands of tenants in Chicago, and would do more to cure the evils of the sweating system than any other measure which could be passed. Until this is enacted, all other local measures must remain attempts to keep the sweating system without any essential modification, but merely with a show of regulating it. It is impossible to keep the system and avoid its consequences.

NECESSITY FOR FEDERAL REGULATION.

The conditions under which garments are manufactured are a matter of national interest. Vast quantities of garments made up in Chicago are sold and worn not only in all parts of Illinois, but throughout the west and southwest. In 1894, when small-pox was epidemic among the sweatshops in the Bohemian and Polish sections of the city, it was a matter of vital interest, on which action was taken by the Boards of Health in a number of States. that infectious goods should not be received from this State. This danger of sending infection from tenement house shops to other communities is always existent, though attention is not concentrated upon it at other times as it is during an epidemic. On the other hand, there are wholesalers and retailers of clothing in Illinois who do not manufacture here nor purchase of Illinois manufacturers. These have on hand, at all times, the product of eastern sweatshops among the goods which they offer for sale; and the eastern sweatshop is in no way better than the Chicago shop, its product is no more likely to be non-infected. The conditions which characterize the tenement shop are the same everywhere; and the purchasing public, warned by the press and enlightened by official reports from all the States which attempt to deal with this system of manufacture, is beginning to ask why it should be tolerated anywhere.

The Labor Commissioner of Missouri in his last report says:

In inspecting the St. Louis factories special attention was paid to what are called sweatshops. Although eastern cities have long been cursed with the pernicious system of sweating, it is only in recent years that St. Louis has been invaded by this class of establishments. The manufacture of clothing has increased rapidly in this city in the last few years, and with it has come the sweatshops. These shops are usually located in some dilapidated dwelling, where the work is carried on in the rooms used for cooking, eating and sleeping, to say nothing of the numerous small children with which each shop is generally supplied. Some of these shops are difficult to locate without a guide, being on the top floors of tenement houses. In order to reach these it is necessary to go through narrow, dirty hallways into a court, where is located the hydrant which furnishes the water supply for the whole building. In this court is also found the closet used in common by all the tenants. This court in most cases is filthy and foul smelling, proving a potent factor in breeding disease. On climbing two or three flights of rickety stairways, narrow and steep, the shop is reached where from seven to twelve persons are huddled together in small, badly lighted, poorly ventilated rooms. In many cases the bosses know so little of the English language that they could neither understand the inspector nor make themselves understood.

The inspector in St. Louis reported that out of 106 places visited, only four were suitable for occupancy.

In his latest report the Massachusetts inspector says:

No more serious problem has developed in recent years in connection with what is called the labor question than that relating to the manufacture of clothing in tenement houses. The sweatshop system has made such rapid strides in Boston, and some of the other cities of this commonwealth, and has bred such serious evils, that it attracted general attention in the legislature and the newspapers. Vigorous steps have been taken, by prosecutions and otherwise, to suppress these evils. The great majority of garment workers in our large cities who are under the sway of sweaters are people who are ignorant of our language and customs. It has been contended that these miserable occupants of sweatshops are in improved circumstances relatively to their condition in the old world, and ought to be contented. It would be lamentable if these white slaves were contented with their lot. Such conditions must not exist in our community; and the willingness to submit to filthy and unwholesome sanitary surroundings, in order to get the bare means of existence, affords no excuse for those who are endeavoring to maintain the sweating system among us. The people who toil 12 and 14 hours in the sweating system—and everything akin to it and resulting from it—must be suppressed in the interest of humanity. Morality condemns it, good citizenship cannot tolerate it. No voice has ever been heard in its defense, either in the legislature or in the public press. The most dismal refugees of toil and poverty known to the civilized world have been disclosed in what are called tenement house districts, among conditions so wretched that the imagination quails before them. Little children have been found crouching upon piles of garments in various stages of manufacture, their slight strength enlisted in some part of the work, shut out from the air and sunlight, and in an atmosphere foul with exhalations and unmentionable forms of filth, all through the long hours of a

Concerning the Massachusetts statute the inspectors says:

One of its [the sweating system's] most baneful effects is the low wages paid for tenement house work; and unfortunately it is one that legislation cannot directly affect. Another evil, and one the law directly deals with, is the existence of infectious and contagious diseases in tenements where clothing is made. Protection to the public health against contagious and infectious diseases in the sale and manufacture of clothing can be secured and guaranteed only by the making of the entire garment in regular, well ventilated and sanitary workshops. Another factor that links itself closely with non-sanitary houses is the unimproved condition of many of them Buildings that were originally intended for one or two families are now divided into tenements of one or two rooms, for the accommodation of five or six families. Another source of trouble arises from the continual removal of persons having a license, without sending notice of such removal.

In the report for 1894 of the Pennsylvania Factory Inspectore, it is said of the sweatshops of Philadelphia:

The fact is that a large number of presumably reputable tailoring establishments send out work, and all such work is invariably sent out because it is cheaper than to do it on their own premises, and this cheapness constitutes the sweating system, the reduced price being "sweated" out of the unfortunates who secured the cheap work. The sweat shop often consists of one room, or two rooms, used both for the work and for living purposes; rooms where cleanliness is unknown, all the laws of health are violated, and disease and death are prevalent. There are in Philadelphia 648 sweatshops where, in normal times, not less than 6.000 men, women and children live and toil. The scenes witnessed during our special investigation of these shops beggar description. I therefore sum up the whole thing in one word, and call them loathsome; fit places for the application of drastic legislative measures.

Not all the good made in sweatshops find their way to the bargain counter. On the contrary, garments of first quality and supposed to have been made by the most advanced and highest skilled tailors, are made in sweatshops. The letter carriers' uniforms, and uniforms worn by the employés of some of the largest corporations in the land, are made in sweatshops. The judge on the bench, the editor at his desk, the lawyer pleading at the bar, and the minister exhorting in the pulpit, are clothed in the garments made in sweatshops, though none of them patronize the bargain counter.

In Chicago, as in Philadelphia, official uniforms are made up in sweatshops. The inspectors find militia, police, and firemen's uniforms in process of manufacture in sweatshops, although the manufacturers who take orders for uniforms have wholesome premises where an unsuspecting public supposes their manufacture is carried on. In fact, only the cutting and trimming of the goods is done on the premises bearing the manufacturers' sign; when the goods are ready for making up they are bundled off to tenement-house sweatshops.

It is claimed that 80 per cent. of the ready-made clothing sold in the United States is manufactured in New York, and that the sweating system in this country had its inception in cities of that State. In that State, also, was enacted the first legislation intended to regulate the system. The experiences of the New York inspectors are, therefore, most valuable. At the Eighth Annual Convention of the International Association of Factory Inspectors, held in Philadelphia, in September, 1894, Assistant Chief Factory Inspector Franey, of New York, was requested to prepare a paper upon the "Sweating System" to appear as a part of the proceedings of the convention. In this paper Mr. Franey said:

In the state of New York, since the first anti-sweating clause was inserted in the factory law, we have carried on a vigorous war against the evil, and we must still acknowledge that there is a depth and breadth to the horrors which lie at the root of the sweating system which no law yet enacted, either in New York or elsewhere, has eradicated or can eradicate. The undue competition which arises from the conditions that keep alive the sweating system can not be checked by laws which simply eliminate the outsider from working in some compatriot's living rooms. The worst abuses of the system cannot be rectified by compelling shops to be clean, well ventilated and properly lighted. The hours of labor cannot be kept within humane and legal limits [hours of labor of females and of minors are regulated by statute in New York] in the larger cities, unless an army of inspectors is kept constantly on the alert, peeping into shops located in out-of-the-way places, and upon upper floors or rear rooms of shop buildings, both in the early morning hours and late at night. In every city we have seen the victims of the system striving with pitlable energy to perform their tasks as they labor, it may well be said unceasingly, in stifling rooms, with every principle of hygiene and health set at deflance, with ill-fed and poorly clad bodies, unclean in person and degraded in mind. We may see the low level of civilization to which they have been forced, by the decayed vegetables and fruit and the stinking meat and fish which are the staples on sale at the markets which they patronize. Their animal disregard of the ordinary decencies of life is of itself a sermon upon the appalling demoralization prevailing among these white slaves of the cities, and this alone should incite a general demand for a governmental policy which will relieve the body politic of a blot upon its fame as a progressive and intelligent nation.

At the ninth annual convention of the International Association of Factory Inspectors, held in Providence, R. I., in September, 1895, there were present inspectors from Massachusetts, New York and Illinois, who have all had several years' experience in the enforcement of regulative measures applied to the sweating system. The attempt in these three States, which have been and are the greatest centers of the sweating system in this country, is the same, viz: to keep the system and diminish its evils. All these officers who have been entrusted with the task of enforcing restrictive measures agree that the shifting mass of irresponsible employers and helpless, hopeless employés, cannot be adequately watched and rendered harmless to the community by the force of inspectors which it is possible to maintain in any State. All are alike convinced by their experience that, if regulation is to be successful, it must be carried on, as are the regulation of the tobacco trade and the taxation of alcohol, by the revenue department of the United States government, which has the only ma-chinery thus far devised for coping successfully with small and scattered producers. These inspectors therefore agreed in urging that the national government should intervene.

The inspectors of all the States in which legislation has been tried recommend the enactment of the Sulzer bill, now perding before Congress, the intent of which is to place the responsibility for the conditions under which the manufacture of clothing is carried on upon the wholesalers, by requiring them to file a bond for each contractor in their employ, whose shop is on tenement house premises, guaranteeing the conditions of the shops. The text of this law is submitted herewith.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION. H. R. 3346.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Read twice, referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Sulzer introduced the following bill:

A bill to raise additional revenue for the support of the government.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every person, firm, copartnership, company or corporation engaged in the manufacture or sale of shirts, neckwear, cloaks, coats, overcoats, vests, trousers, underwear, cigarettes, cigars. furs or fur trimmings who shall give out the goods or material of which said articles are made for the purpose of having the same made up or manufactured in rooms or buildings occupied for eating, sleeping, or domestic purposes, except by the watchman or janitor thereof, including his family, shall hereafter pay a tax of three hundred dollars annually for each person with whom a contract or agreement to wholly or partially manufacture or make up such articles shall be made.

Section 2. That every person, firm, copartnership, company or corporation engaged in the manufacturing or selling of the articles mentioned and specified in the first section of this act, who shall give out the goods or materials of which the aforesaid articles are made for the purpose of having the same wholly or partially made up on the premises other than those occupied by said firm, copartnership, company or corporation, shall, before giving out said goods or materials, pay into the office of the internal revenue collector for the district in which it is proposed to manufacture or make up the said goods or materials, the amount of the tax provided for in section one of this act. and the internal revenue collector to whom the tax is paid shall give two vouchers therefor, one of which vouchers shall be given to the person to whom the goods or materials of said person, firm, copartners, company or corporation are issued; said voucher shall be kept in a conspicuous place at all times, and posted in the work room or one of the person, firm, copartners, company or corporation which give out said goods or materials, and shall be produced for inspection on demand of any officer of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Section 3. That the provisions of this act shall be enforced by the various collectors of internal revenue of the United States, in their respective districts, and said collectors shall keep a register of all manufacturers of articles mentioned in section one of this act, in their respective districts, and on the first day of May in each and every year, and as often as necessary, shall obtain and require written reports from the said manufacturers, stating name of persons to whom such goods and materials are given out to be wholly or partially made up, and said report shall be kept on file and open to inspection at all reasonable hours.

Section 4. That the provisions of this act shall not be construed to affect any person or persons in the direct employ of any person, firm, copartners, company or corporation occupying premises not used for eating, sleeping or domestic purposes, and which are leased, rented, or owned by the person, firm, copartners, company or corporation which owns, or gives out to be wholly or partially made, the goods or materials mentioned in section one of this act, and where all the persons engaged at labor therein are paid regularly by such person, firm, copartners, company or corporation, and not through the medium of a middle-man or contractor.

Section 5. That any violation of the provisions of this act shall be a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

Section 6. That this act shall take effect immediately.

No one State can protect its citizens from the dangers of tenement house manufacture, for garments are constantly imported from one State to another, and though terement house manufacture were abolished in Chicago, as it surely must be in the near future, there would still be the danger of purchasing infectious goods, made elsewhere. It has been found in New York that the rigid enforcement of the tenement house law, has merely sent a host of sweaters to New Jersey and Connecticut. Philadelphia, too, has developed the system upon a large scale, and the city of homes threatens to become the city of sweatshops unless vigorous measures are promptly taken. While, therefore, it is absolutely pecessary that tenement house manufacture in Illinois should be prohibited, it is necessary, at the same time, to urge upon Congress the enactment of a measure to protect the Illinois purchaser from infection by means of garments imported from other places. and to give the Illinois manufacturers a fair field of competition by placing the same responsibility upon all alike, in all parts of the country.

There can be no security from the evils of the sweating system and tenement house manufacture, until we have uniform measures uniformly enforced throughout the great industrial centers.

TABLES ON THE CLOAK AND CLOTHING TRADES.

Explanatory—The number of outside shops in the cloak and clothing trades, and the number of persons employed in them, are shown on page 49. In the tables which follow, many of these shops with their employés appear more than once; because more than one manufacturer sends work to the same shop, and the shop with its employés appears in the summary of each manufacturer who has work done in it.

The location of outside shops is ascertained from lists which the law requires the manufacturers to keep and produce on the demand of an inspector (See Appendix C); the lists are verified by inspections of the shops, and the schedules of the inspections, on which these tables are based, are filed in the inspector's office.

Wherever the words "No inside shop" occur, the meaning is that no garment is made up on the premises named. The cutting is done there, after which the garment is sent out to be made and finished.

To each manufacturer there is given in these tables one line showing: The inside shop (if any) and its employés; the total number of outside shops; the number of these not upon tenement house premises; the number on such premises: the number of families living on the premises with the shops; the situation of the shops and the number of employés.

In the next column to that which gives the total number of outside shops is the number not on tenement house premises. Of these, some are in buildings given over entirely to clothing manufacture; are usually, though not always, supplied with steam power, and are in fair sanitary condition; others are in store fronts, with one family living on the same premises: and still others in a room of a dwelling which is not classed as a tenement house, because only one family lives on the premises.

It is shown: (1) That each manufacturer has some shops not on tenement house premises, but every one has more shops that are on such premises (compare columns 2 and 3 of outside shops); (2) that these tenement house premises are, as a rule, crowded with tenants (compare columns 3 and 4 of outside shops); (3) that a large proportion of these shops are over stables or sheds, in basements, mixed in with the sweater's family, or upon upper floors (see columns of situation of out-ide shops); and upper floors of these buildings where shops and tenants are crowded together are almost invariably found with defective water supply, pest-breeding closets, walls clothed with filth, infested with vermin.

These tables will be found: for the cloak trade, pages 66-67; for the ready-made clothing trade, pages 68-74; for the custom-made clothing trade, page 75-93.

PROSECUTIONS.

Section 9 provides that it shall be the duty of the Factory Inspector to enforce the provisions of this law and to prosecute all violations thereof in any court of competent jurisdiction in this State. In accordance with this requirement, the inspectors now bring suit in every case of violation for which evidence can be obtained.

The Record of Convictions which follows shows that, during 1895, 278 employers were convicted of 542 violations of the statute. Ten defendants were convicted twice. The fines paid amounted to $1,127.00, in addition to the court costs. Suit was brought under seven provisions of the statute as follows: Employing a child under 14 years, 56 defendants, 80 children; employing a child under 16 years of age without an affidavit, 223 defendants, 408 children; failure to post record of children, 7; failure to keep register of children, 4; failure to post hours. 2; employing a female more than 8 hours in one day, 3; employing in living rooms persons not members of the family, 33.

Of the 56 defendants convicted of employing children under 14 years of age, 30 were sweaters employing 34 such children. Of the defendants employing children under 16 years of age without affidavits, 129 were sweaters employing 201 children in that way.

Of 32 defendants convicted of employing outsiders while using their living rooms for shops, 9 were cigarmakers and 23 were garment workers.

Of a total of 488 children employed in violation of the law 235 were in sweatshops.

This Record of Convictions indicates that compliance with the main provisions of the law is not yet universal. Nor are the violations confined to employers engaged in any one branch of manufacture. A few names found in last year's record recur this year, where this is the case, however, the violations are of a more technical nature this year than in the first offense. Thus in some cases, where the prosecution, in 1894, was by reason of the employment of a child under the age of 14 years, it is this year; against the same employer for failure to post correct wall records or to keep the register full and complete.

The inspectors prosecute every employer who fails to produce, on demand, an affidavit for every child found at work. Employers are, therefore, increasingly careful to provide and file affidavits for all the children. It is evident from the relatively small number of second offenses, that the small fines imposed have, with the costs of court, and the annoyance of arrest and trial, had a somewhat deterrent effect.

In Alton and Streator, it has been found impossible to convict, and we have lost eleven suits in the former city and seven in the latter, although the evidence was complete in a number of the cases. At Alton, the counsel for the Illinois Glass company is the former mayor of the city who acted as attorney for the company while filling this municipal office. In Streator, the counsel of the Bottle and Glass Company is an ex-mayor of the city.

In Chicago, it has been possible to find both justices and juries indifferent to this influence, although many aldermen and other minor politicians appear in court during the trials, not in the capacity of counsel, for they are not lawyers, but merely to try the effect of their political "pull."

The fact that 278 violators of the statute have been successfully prosecuted during the present year compared with 81 last year and 23 in 1893, does not indicate that there have been more violations during the present year, but merely that the department is in a position to fulfill more nearly the requirement of section 9 by prosecuting all violations.

The prosecutions are carried on by the Inspector, counsel being called in only when the trial is outside of Chicago. This change saves time and money and enables the arrest to follow quickly upon the violation. This method of procedure has been rendered possible only by the increasing efficiency of the Deputy Inspectors.

This growing efficiency cannot, however, make up for the inadequacy of the appropriation. With thousands of employers in the State, many hundreds of them irresponsible and ignorant, the only hope of equitable enforcement of the statute lies in prompt and uniform prosecution of all violations. In a State as large as Illinois, with its widely scattered centers of industry, the present meager funds at the disposal of the inspectors do not enable them to make such frequent inspections as equity demands. It is, therefore, probable that there are violations undetected in in some of the remoter manufacturing communities which could be checked if means were available to keep more inspectors constantly travelling through the State.

The number of persons convicted is 278. The number 327 results from the fact that ten persons were twice convicted for the same offense, and 39 were convicted of different violations.

APPROPRIATIONS.

Owing to the meagreness of the appropriation made for the traveling expenses of the inspectors, it is not possible to visit all the factories and workshops in the State, even once a year. Each year the inspectors have visited more establishments; and, in 1895, 48 towns and cities have been reached. There are, however, some industrial centers which have not been visited during the present year, and the limit has been reached of the work which can be done with $4,000 a year. There is no farther economy which can be practiced.

The equipment of the inspectors in Illinois is much smaller than is usual in States which provide at all for factory inspectors. In Massachusetts there are 30 inspectors, and the annual appropriation is somewhat over $70,000. In New York there are 34 inspectors, and the annual appropriation is about $65,000. In Ohio the appropriation is $41,000, and there are 12 inspectors. In Illinois the inspectors are 12 also, but the appropriation is only $14,000 a year, of which $10,000 is for salaries (for 12 persons), leaving only $4,000 for traveling and all other legitimate expenses.

In a State as large as Illinois, with its widely scattered centers of industry, the scantiness of this appropriation renders impossible such frequent inspection as efficiency and equity demand.

BECOMMENDATIONS.

In accordance with section 9 we recommend:

CHILD LABOB.

1. That the provisions of the law be extended to mercantile institutions, offices and laundries.

2. That no child under 16 years should be employed at any occupation dangerous to life and limb, health or morals; and that the presence of a child in a factory or workshop should be made to constitute prima facie evidence of its employment.

3. That no child under 16 years of age should be permitted to work who cannot read and write simple sentences in the English language.

4. That all peddlers, vendors, newsboys, newsgirls and bootblacks under 16 years of age should be required to obtain licenses from the Factory Inspector, and that none should be licensed who are less than 14 years of age, or who cannot read and write simple English.

5. That two physicians should be added to the staff of inspectors, a man and a woman, who should give their whole time to the enforcement of sections 1 and 2 of the law, and to the children employed in factories, workshops and mercantile institutions; and that no other health certificate except those granted by these physicians should be valid.

6. That the prosecution of parents who violate the law requiring children between the ages of 8 and 14 years to attend school be made, not as it now is, discretionary with local school boards, but mandatory upon them, as the prosecution of all violations of the factory law is now mandatory upon the Factory Inspector. (This is essential to the successful enforcement of section 4 of the factory law.)

7. That the inspectors should have power to require ventilation, sanitation, lighting, heating, fire escapes; safeguarding machinery, elevators and well holes; and employers should be required to report to the inspectors, within 24 hours after its occurrence, every accident upon their premises. 8. That no boy under 18 years of age should be allowed to operate an elevator; and no minor should be permitted to operate an elevator running at a speed of more than 200 feet per minute.

9. That failure to supply adequate safeguards for life and limb \int in factories and workshops should be made a crime.

TENEMENT HOUSE MANUFACTUBE.

10. That no article whatsoever, intended for sale, should be manufactured in any tenement house, or in the rear of any tenement house.

HOURS OF LABOR.

11. That it should be made unlawful to employ any child at any gainful occupation longer than 8 hours in any one day, or 48 hours in any one week; and that no child be permitted to work after 9 p. m. or before 6 a. m.

APPROPRIATIONS.

12. That the appropriation for traveling and other legitimate expenses of the inspectors be made $10,000 per year.

THE PENALTY CLAUSE.

13. That the penalty clause should be so amended as to render it a misdemeanor to interfere with the inspectors in the performance of their duties.

14. That section 8 should be amended so as to contain the following clause:

Any person, and every member of any firm, and any agent or manager of a firm or corporation, employing persons or managing factories or workshops covered by this act, who, whether for himself or for such firm or corporation, or by himself or through sub-agents or foremen, shall violate or fail to comply with any of the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than $3 nor more than $100 for each offense; and any corporation which, by its agents, officers or servants, shall fail to comply with or shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be liable to the same penalty, which may be recovered against said corporation in an action of debt or assumpsit brought before any court of competent jurisdiction.

APPENDIX A.

OPINION OF SUPREME COURT OF ILLINOIS.

FILED MARCH 18, 1895.

RITCHIE VS. THE PEOPLE.

Opinion of Magnuder, J.:

Upon complaint of the Factory Inspector appointed under the law hereinafter named, a warrant was issued by a justice of the peace of Cook county against plaintiff in error, and, upon his appearance and waiver in writing of jury trial, a trial was had, resulting in a finding of guilty, and the imposition of a fine of $5 and costs. The complaint charged that, on a certain day in February, 1894, plaintiff in error employed a certain adult female of the age of more than eighteen years, at work in a factory for more than eight hours during said day. The plaintiff in error took an appeal to the Criminal Court of Cook county and waived a jury, and upon trial in that court before the judge without a jury he was convicted and fined. The case is brought to this court by writ of error for the purpose of removing such judgment of the Criminal Court.

Upon the trial of the cause the defendant below submitted written propositions to be held as law in the decision of the case. By these propositions the trial court was asked to hold that the act of the legislature of Illinois entitled "An act to regulate the manufacture of clothing, wearing apparel and other articles in this State, and to provide for the appointment of State Inspectors to enforce the same, and to make an appropriation therefor." approved June 17, 1893 (Laws of Ill., 1893, page 99), and each and every section thereof, is illegal and void, and contrary to and in violation of the Constitutions of Illinois and of the United States. The Court refused all the propositions so submitted, and exception was taken by the defendant.

The present prosecution, as is conceded by counsel for both sides, is for an alleged violation of section 5 of said act. That section is as follows:

"No female shall be employed in any factory or workshop more than eight hours in any one day, or forty-eight hours in any one week."

"Factory" or "workshop" is defined in section 7 of the act as follows: "The words 'manufacturing establishment,' 'factory,' or 'workshop,' wherever used in this act, shall be construed to mean any place where goods or products are manufactured or repaired, cleaned or sorted, in whole or in part, for sale or for wages."

Punishment for violation of the provisions of the act is provided for by section 8 thereof, in the following words: "Any person, firm or corporation who fails to comply with any provision of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be tined not less than three dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each offense."

The main objection urged against the act, and that to which the discussion of counsel on both sides is chiefly directed, relates to the validity of section 5. It is contended by counsel for plaintiff in error, that that section is unconstitutional, as imposing unwarranted restrictions upon the right to contract. On the other hand, it is claimed by counsel for 'The People, that the section is a sanitary provision, and justifiable as an exercise of the police power of the State.

Does the provision in question restrict the right to contract? The words "No female shall be employed," import action on the part of two persons. There must be a person who does the act of employing, and a person who consents to the act of being employed. Webster defines employment as not only "the act of employing," but, also, "the state of being employed." The prohibition of the statute is, therefore, two-fold: first, that no manufacturer, or proprietor of a factory or workshop, shall employ any female therein more than eight hours in any one day; and, second, that no female shall consent to be so employed. It thus prohibits employer and employé from uniting their minds, or agreeing upon any longer service during one day than eight hours. In other words, they are prohibited, the one from contracting to employ, and the other from contracting to be employed, otherwise than as directed.

"To be employed in anything means not only the act of doing it, but also to be engaged to do it; to be under contract or orders to do it." (U. S. vs. Morris, 14 Pet., 464). Hence, a direction that a person shall not be employed more than a specified number of hours in one day, is at the same time a direction, that such person shall not be under contract to work for more than a specified number of hours in one day. It follows that section 5 does limit and restrict the right of the manufac turer and his employé to contract with each other in reference to the hours of labor.

Is the restriction thus imposed an infringement upon the constitutional rights of the manufacturer and the employé? Section 2 of article 2 of the Constitution of Illinois provides, that no person shall be deprived of live, liberty or property, without due process of law. A number of cases have arisen within recent years in which the courts have had occasion to consider this provision, or one similar to it, and its meaning has been quite clearly defined. The privilege of contracting is both a liberty and property right. (Frorer v. The People, 141 Ill., 171). Liberty includes the right to acquire property, and that means and includes the right to make and enforce contracts. (The State v. Loomis, 115 Mo., 307). The right to use, buy and sell property and contract in respect thereto is protected by the Constitution. Labor is property, and the laborer has the same right to sell his labor, and to contract with reference thereto, as has any other property owner. In this country the legislature has no power to prevent persons who are sui juris from mak-ing their own contracts, nor can it interfere with the freedom of contract between the workman and the employer. The right to labor or employ labor, and make contracts in respect thereto upon such terms as may be agreed upon between the parties, included in the constitutional guaranty above quoted. (State vs. Goodwill, 33 W. Va., 179; Godcharles vs. Wigman, 113 Pa. St., 431; Braceville Coal Co. vs. The People, 147 Ill., 66). The protection of property is one of the objects for which free governments are instituted among men. (Constitution of Ill., Article 2, section 1). The right to acquire, possess, and protect property includes the right to make reasonable contracts. (Commonwealth vs. Pearly, 155 Mass., 117). And when an owner is deprived of one of the attributes of property, like the right to make contracts, he is deprived of his property within the meaning of the Constitution. (Matter of application of Jacobs, 98 N. Y, 98). The fundamental rights of Englishmen brought to this country by its original settlers and wrested from time to time in the progress of history from the sovereigns of the English nation, have been reduced by Blackstone to their principal or primary articles; "the right of personal security, the right of personal liberty, and the right of private property." (1 Blacks Com. marg. p. 129). The right to contract is the only way by which a person can rightfully acquire property by his own labor. "Of all the rights of persons it is the most essential to human happiness." (Leep vs. St. L. I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 58 Ark., 407).

This right to contract, which is thus included in the fundamental rights of liberty and property, cannot be taken away "without due process of law." The words "due process of law," have been held to be synonymous with the words; "law of the land." (The State vs. Loomis, supra; Frorer vs. The People, supra) Blackstone says: "The third absolute right inherent in every Englishman, is that of property, which consists in the free use, enjoyment and disposal of all his acquisitions, without any control or diminution, save only by the laws of the land." (1 Blacks. Com. p. 138; ex parte Jacobs, 98 N. Y., 98). The "law of the land" is "general public law binding upon all the members of the community, under all circumstances, and not partial or private laws affecting the rights of private individuals, or classes of individuals." (Willett vs. The People, 117 III., 294.) The "law of the land" is the opposite of "arbitrary. unequal and partial legislation." (The State vs. Loomis, supra). The legislature has no right to deprive one class of persons of privileges allowed to other persons under like conditions. The man who is forbidden to acquire and enjoy property in the same manner in which the rest of the community is permitted to acquire and enjoy it, is deprived of liberty in particulars of primary importance to his pursuit of happiness. If one man is denied the right to contract as he has hitherto done under the law, and as others are still allowed to do by the law, he is deprived of both liberty and property to the extent to which he is thus deprived of the right. In line with these principles, it has been held that it is not competent, under the Constitution, for the legislature to single out owners and employers of a particular class, and provide that they shall bear burdens not imposed on other owners of property or employers of labor, and prohibit them from making contracts which other owners or employers are permitted to make. (Millet vs. The People, supra. Florer vs. The People, supra; Rams

We are not unmindful that the right to contract may be subject to limitations growing out of the duties which the individual owes to society, to the public, or the government. These limitations are sometimes imposed by the obligation so to use one's own as not to injure another, by the character of property as affected with a public interest or devoted to a public use, by the demands of public policy or the necessity of protecting the public from fraud or injury, by the want of capacity, by the needs of the necessitous borrower as against the demands of the extortionate lender. But the power of the legislature to thus limit the right to contract must rest upon some reasonable basis, and cannot be arbitrarily exercised. It has been said that such power is based in every case on some condition, and not on the absolute right to control. Where legislative enactments, which operate upon classes of individuals only, have been held to be valid, it has been where the classification was reasonable and not arbitrary. (Leep vs. St. L., I. M. & S. Ry. Co. supra; The State vs. Loomis, supra.)

Applying these principles to the consideration of section 5, we are led irresistibly to the conclusion, that it is an unconstitutional and void enactment. While some of the language of the act is broad enough to embrace within its terms the manufacture of all kinds of goods or products, other provisions are limited to the manufacture of "coats, vests, trousers, knee pants, overalls, cloaks, shirts, ladies' waists, purses. feathers, artificial flowers, or cigars, or any wearing apparel of any kind whatsoever." The act is entitled "An act to regulate the manufacture of clothing, wearing apparel and other articles, etc." Under the rule of construction heretofore laid down by this Court, that general and specific words, which are capable of an analogous meaning, being associated together, take color from each other so that the general words are restricted to a sense analogous to the less general, it would seem that the general words: "And other articles" would be restricted to a meaning analogous to the meaning of the words "clothing, wearing apparel," and consequently that they would only embrace articles of the same kind as those expressly enumerated. (First National Bank of Joliet vs. Adam, 138 111. 483; Misch vs. Russell, 136 111. 22.) But whether this is so or not, we are inclined to regard the act as one which is partial and discriminating in its character. If it be construed as applying only to manufacturers of clothing, wearing apparel, and articles of a similar nature, we can see no reasonable ground for prohibiting such manufacturers and their employes from contracting for more than eight hours of work in one day, while other manufacturers and their employes are not forbidden so to contract. If the act be construed as applying to manufacturers of all kinds of products there is no good reason why the prohibition should be directed against manufacturers and their employes, and not against merchants or builders, or contractors, or carriers, or farmers, or persons engaged in other branches of industry and their employes therein. Women employed by manufacturers are forbidden by section 5 to make contracts to labor longer than eight hours in a day, while women employed as saleswomen in stores, or as domestic servants, or as bookkeepers, or stenographers, or typewriters, or in laundries or other occupations not embraced under the head of manufacturing, are at liberty to contract for as many hours of labor in a day as they choose.

The manner in which the section thus discriminates against one class of employers and employes and in favor of all others, places it in opposition to the constitutional guarantee hereinbefore discussed, and so renders it invalid.

But aside from its partial and discriminating character, this enactive ment is a purely arbitrary restriction upon the fundamental right of the citizen to control his or her own time and faculties. It substitutes the judgment of the legislature for the judgment of the employer and employe in a matter about which they are competent to agree with each other. It assumes to dictate to what extent the capacity to labor may be exercised by the employe, and takes away the right of private judgment as to the amount and duration of the labor to be put forth in a specified period. Where the legislature thus undertakes to impose an unreasonable and unnecessary burden upon any one citizen or class of citizens, it transcends the authority entrusted to it by the constitution, even though it imposes the same burden upon all other citizens or classes of citizens. General laws may be as tyrannical as partial laws. A distinguished writer upon constitutional limitations has said, that general rules may sometimes be as obnoxious as special, if they operate to deprive individual citizens of vested rights, and that, while every man has a right to require that his own controversies shall be judged by the same rules that are applied in the controversies of his neighbors, the whole community is also entitled, at all times, to demand the pro-tection of the ancient principles which shield private rights against arbitrary interference over the web such interference. arbitrary interference, even though such interference may be under a rule impartial in its operation. (Cooley on Const. Lim., 5 Ed., top pge. 434; mrg. pge? 355; Bank of Columbia vs. Okley, 4 Wheat. 235.) Section 1 of article 2 of the constitution of Illinois provides as follows: "All men are by nature free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights; among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. To secure these rights and the protection of property, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the gov-erned." Liberty, as has already been stated, includes the right to make contracts, as well with reference to the amount and duration of labor to be performed as concerning any other lawful matter. Hence the right to make contracts is an inherent and inalienable one, and any attempt to unreasonably abridge it is opposed to the constitution. was actually said in Leep vs. St. L., I. M. & S. Ry. Co., supra: "W As "When the subject of contract is purely and exclusively private, unaffected by any public interest or duty to person, to society or government, and the parties are capable of contracting, there is no condition existing upon which the legislature cin interfere for the purpose of prohibiting the contract or controlling the terms thereof."

An instance of the care with which this right to contract has been guarded may be found in chapter 48 of the Revised Statutes of this State, where an act passed in 1867 makes eight hours of labor in certain employments a legal day's work where there is no special contract or agreement to the contrary; and the second section of which act contains the following provision: "Nor shall any person be prevented by anything herein contained from working as many hours overtime or extra hours as he or she may agree."

In ex parte Kuback, 85 Cal., 274, an ordinance of the city of Los Angeles, making it a misdemeanor for any contractor to employ any person to work more than eight hours a day where the work was to be performed under any contract with the city, was held to be unconstitutional and void, the Supreme Court of California there saying:

"It is claimed, in support of the petition, that this ordinance was unconstitutional and void. We think this objection is well taken. It is simply an attempt to prevent certain parties from employing others in a lawful business and paying them for their services, and is a direct infringement of the right of such person to make and enforce their contracts. If the service to be performed were unlawful or against public policy, or the employment were such as might be unfit for certain persons, as for example, females or infants, the ordinance might be upheld as a sanitary or police regulation, but we cannot conceive of any theory upon which a city could be justified in making a misdemeanor for one of its citizens to contract with another for services to be rendered because the contract is that he shall work more than a limited number of hours per day."

In the case of Law vs. Rees Printing Co., recently decided by the Supreme Court of Nebraska (Opinion filed June 6, 1894), an act of the legislature of that State providing that eight hours should constitute a legal day's work for all classes of mechanics, servants and laborers throughout the state, excepting those engaged in farm and domestic labor, and making violation of the provisions a misdemeanor, was held to be unconstitutional and void, both as being special legislation and as attempting to prevent persons, legally competent to enter into contracts, from making their own contracts.

But it is claimed, on behalf of defendant in error, that this section can be sustained as an exercise of the police power of the State. The police power of the State is that power which enables it to promote the health, comfort, safety and welfare of society. It is very broad and farreaching, but is not without its limitations. Legislative acts passed in pursuance of it must not be in conflict with the constitution, and must have some relation to the ends sought to be accomplished; that is to say, to the comfort, welfare or safety of society. Where the ostensible object of an enactment is to secure the public comfort, welfare or safety, it must appear to be adapted to that end; it cannot invade the rights of persons and property under the guise of a mere police regulation, when it is not such in fact; and where such an act takes away the property of a citizen or interferes with his personal liberty, it is the province of the pomotion of the comfort, safety and welfare of society. (Lake View vs. Rose Hill Cem. Co., 70 Ill, 1891; In re Jacobs, 98 N. Y., 98; People vs. Gilson, 109 N. Y., 389).

There is nothing in the title of the act of 1893 to indicate that it is a sanitary measure. The first three sections contain provisions for keeping workshops in a cleanly state, and for inspection to ascertain whether they are so kept. But there is nothing in the nature of the employment contemplated by the act which is in itself unhealthy, or unlawful, or injurious to the public morals or welfare. Laws restraining the sale and use of oplum and intoxicating liquors have been sustained as valid under the police power. (Ah Lin vs. Ter., I Wash., 156; Mirgler vs. Kansas, 123 U. S., 623.) Undoubtedly, the public health, welfare and safety may be endangered by the general use of oplum and intoxicating drinks. But it cannot be said that the same consequences are likely to flow from the manufacture of clothing, wearing apparel. and other similar articles. "The manufacture of cloth is an important industry, essential to the welfare of the community." (Commonwealth vs. Perry, supra.)

We are not aware that the preparation and manufacture of tobacco into cigars is dangerous to the public health. (In re Jacob, supra.)

It is not the nature of the things done, but the sex of the person doing them, which is made the basis of the claim that the act is a measure for the promotion of the public health. It is sought to sustain the act as an exercise of the police power upon the alleged ground that it is designed to protect woman on account of her sex and physique. It will not be denied that woman is entitled to the same rights, under the Constitution, to make contracts with reference to her labor as are secured thereby to men. The first section of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law."

It has been held that a woman is both a "citizen" and a "person" within the meaning of this section. (Moner vs. Happersett, 21 Wall, 162.) The privileges and immunities here referred to are in general, "protection by the government, with the right to acquire and possess property of every kind, and to pursue and obtain happiness and safety, subject, nevertheless, to such restraints as the government may prescribe for the general good of the whole." (Slaughter-house case, 16 Wall, 36. As a citizen, woman has the right to acquire and possess property of every kind. As a "person" she has the right to claim the benefit of the constitutional provision that she shall not be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law. Involved in these rights thus guaranteed to her is the right to make and enforce contracts. The law accords to her, as to every other citizen, the right to gain a livelihood by intelligence, honesty and industry in the arts, the sciences, the professions, or other vocations. Before the law, her right to a choice of vocations cannot be said to be denied or abridged on account of sex. (In re Leach, 34 N. E. Rep. 641; 134 Ind. 665.)

The tendency of legislation in this State has been to recognize the rights of women in the particulars here specified. The act of 1867, as above quoted, by the use of the words "he or she," plainly declares that no woman shall be prevented by anything therein contained from working as many hours overtime or extra hours as she may agree; and thereby recognizes her right to contract for more than eight hours of work in one day. An act approved March 22, 1872, entitled "An act to secure freedom in the selection of an occupation," etc., provides that "no person shall be precluded or debarred from any occupation, refer, provides that "no person shall be precluded or debarred from any occupation, profession or em-ployment (except military) on account of her sex." (1 Starr & Cur. Ann. Stat., page 1056.) The Married Woman's act of 1874 authorizes a mar-ried woman to sue and be sued without joining her husband, and pro-vides that contracts may be made and liabilities incurred by her and en-forced in the sum over the in the sum over the sum of the sum of the sum of the sum over forced against her to the same extent and in the same manner as if she were unmarried, and that she may receive, use and possess her own earnings, and sue for the same in her own name, free from the inter-ference of her husband, or his creditors. (Rev. Stat. Ill., chap. 68, secs. 1, 6 and 7.) Section 5 of the act of 1893 is broad enough to include mar-ried women and adult single women, as well as minors. As a general thing it is the province of the legislature to determine what regulations are necessary to protect the public health and secure the public safety and welfare. But inasmuch as sex is no bar, under the Constitution and law, to the endowment of woman with the fundamental and inalienable rights of liberty and property which includes the right to make her own contracts, the mere fact of sex will not justify the legislature in putting forth the police power of the State for the purpose of limiting her exercise of those rights, unless the courts are able to see that there is some fair, just and reasonable connection between such limitation and the public health, safety or welfare, proposed to be secured by it. (People vs. Gibson, supra.)

Counsel for the People refer to statements in the text-books, recognizing the propriety of regulations, which for bid women to engage in cer-tain kinds of work altogether. Thus it is said in Cooley on Constitu-tional Limitations, that, "some employments * * * may be admissable for males and improper for females, and regulations recognizing the impropriety and forbidding women engaging in them, would be open to no reasonable objections." (5th ed., p. 745). Attention is also called to the above mentioned act of March 22, 1872, which makes an exception of military service, and provides that nothing in the act shall be construed military service, and provides that nothing in the act shall be construed as requiring any female to work on streets, or roads, or serve on juries. But, without stopping to comment upon measures of this character, it is sufficient to say that what is said in reference to them has no applica-tion to the act of 1893. That act is not based upon the theory that the manufacture of clothing, wearing apparel and other articles is an im-proper occupation for women to be engaged in. It does not inhibit their employment in factories or workshops. On the contrary, it recognizes such places as proper for them to work in by permitting their labor therein during eight hours of each day. The question here is not whether a particular employment is a proper one for the use of female labor, but the question is whether in an employment which is conceded to be lawful in itself and suitable for women to engage in, she shall be labor, but the question is whether in an employment which is conceled to be lawful in itself and suitable for women to engage in, she shall be deprived of the right to determine for herself how many hours she can and may work during each day. There is no reasonable ground—at least none which has been made manifest to us in the arguments of counsel— for fixing upon eight hours in one day as the limit within which woman than work without injury to her physique, and beyond which if she work, injury will necessarily follow. But the police powers of the State can only be permitted to limit or abridge such a fundamental right as the right to make contracts, when the exercise of such power is necessary to promote the health, comfort, welfare or safety of society or the public; and it is questionable whether it can be exercised to prevent injury to and it is questionable whether it can be exercised to prevent injury to the individual engaged in a particular calling. The Court of Appeals of New York in passing upon the validity of an act "To improve the public health by prohibiting the manufacture of cigars and preparation of tobacco in any form in tenement houses," etc., has said: "To justify this law it would not be sufficient that the use of tobacco may be injurthis law it would not be sumcient that the use of topactor may be injurious to those who are engaged in its preparation and manufacture; but it would have to be injurious to the public health." (In re Jacobs, supra). Tiedeman, in his work on Limitations of Police Powers, says: "Insofar as the emin his work on Limitations of Police Powers, says: "Insofar as the em-ployment of a certain class in a particular occupation may threaten or inflict damage upon the public or third persons, there can be no doubt as to the constitutionality of any statute which prohibits their prosecution of that trade. But it is questionable, except in the case of minors, whether the prohibition can rest upon the claim that the employment will prove hurtful to them. * * * There can be no more justification for the prohibition of the prosecution of certain callings by women, because the employment will prove hurtful to themselves, than it would be for the State to prohibit men from working in the manufacture of white lead because they are apt to contract lead poisoning; or to pro-hibit occupation in certain parts of iron smelting works, because the lives of the men so engaged are materially shortened." (Sec. 86).

We are also referred to statements made in some of the text-books to the effect, that the legislature may limit the hours of women in manufacturing establishments. (Parker & Worthington, Public Health and Safety, Sec. 260; 18 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law, p. 753). These statements appear to be based entirely upon the decision of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in Commonwealth vs. Hamilton Mfg. Co., 120 Mass. 385. There it was held, that an act, providing that no woman over the age of eighteen ycars should be employed by any person, firm or corporation, in any manufacturing establishment more than ten hours in any one day, was valid. But, under the constitution of Massachusetts (Art. 4. Sec. 1), the legislature has power to ordain all manner of reasonable and wholesome statutes, with or without penalties, not repugnant to the constitution, "as they shall judge to be for the good and welfare of the commonwealth, and for the governing and ordering thereof, and of the subjects of the same." The decision referred to was evidently made in view of the large discretion so vested in the legislative branch of the government; and it was said, that the act ought to be maintained as a health or police regulation because the legislature deemed the employment of manufacturing dangerous to health. But the Massachusetts case is not in line with the current of authority, as it assumes that the police power is practically without limitation. As has been already stated, the legislature cannot so use that power as to invade the fundamental rights of the citizen: and it is for the courts to decide whether a measure, which assumes to have been passed in the interest of the public health, really "Relates to and is convenient and appropriate to promote the health." (In re Jacobs, supra; People vs. Gibson, supra). We said in Lake View vs. Rose Hill Cem. Co., 70 Ill., 191: "As a general proposition, it may be stated it is the province of the law making power to determine when the exigency exists, calling into exercise this power. What are the subjects of its exercise is clearly a judicial question." The reasoning of the opinion in the Massachusetts case cited does not seem to us to be sound. It assumes that there is no infringement upon the employer's right to contract because he may employ as many persons or as much labor as he chooses, nor upon the employé's right to contract, because she may labor as many hours as she chooses in some other occupation than that specified in the statute. This is a begging of the question. The right to contract would be valueless if it

We cannot more appropriately close the discussion of this branch of the case than by quoting, and adopting as our own, the following words of the New York Court of Appeals, in re Jacobs, supra: "When a health law is challenged in the courts as unconstitutional on the ground that it arbitrarily interferes with personal liberty and private property, without due process of law, the courts must be able to see that it bas at least in fact some relation to the public health, that the public health is the end actually aimed at, and that it is appropriate and adapted to that end. This we have not been able to see in this law (section), and we must therefore pronounce it unconstitutional and void. In reaching this conclusion we have not been unmindful that the power which courts possess to condemn legislative acts which are in conflict with the supreme law should be exercised with great caution, and even with rejuctance. But, as said by Chancellor Kent (I Com., 450): 'It is only by the free exercise of this power that courts of justice are enabled to repel assaults and to protect every part of the government, and every member of the community from undue and destructive innovations upon their charter rights.'"

It is furthermore contended by plaintiff in error that the act of 1893 is void upon the alleged ground that it contains two distinct subjects, and that both of these are expressed in the title. The two constitutional provisions which are invoked in favor of this position are sections 13 and 16 of article 4. Section 13 is as follows:

"No act hereafter passed shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title. But if any subject shall be embraced in an act which shall not be expressed in the title, such act shall be void only as to so much thereof as shall not be so expressed." Section 16 is as follows:

"The General Assembly shall make no appropriation of money out of the treasury in any private law. Bills making appropriations for the pay of members and officers of the General Assembly, and for the salaries of the officers of the government shall contain no provision on any other subject."

The two subjects alleged to be contained in the act and expressed in its title, are, first, the general subject of regulating the manufacture of clothing, wearing apparel and other articles, including the requirements as to cleanliness, inspection, employment of minors, keeping registers of names, ages, residences, etc., appointment of inspectors, fixing their salaries, duties, terms of office, etc., and, second, the appropriation of money for the payment of salaries of the inspectors.

Section 9 of the act provides that "The governor shall, upon the taking effect of this act, appoint a factory inspector, at a salary of fifteen hundred dollars per annum, an assistant factory inspector, at a salary of one thousand dollars per annum, and ten deputy factory inspectors, of whom five shall be women, at a salary of seven hundred and fifty dollars per annum each. The term of office of the factory inspector shall be four years, and the assistant factory inspector and the deputy factory inspectors shall hold office during good behavior. Said inspector, assistant inspector and deputy inspectors shall be empowered to visit and inspect at all reasonable hours, and as often as practicable, the workshops, factories and manufacturing establishments in this State where the manufacture of goods is carried on. And the inspectors shall report in writing to the governor on the fifteenth day of December. annually, the result of their inspection and investigation, together with such other information and recommendations as they may deem proper. And said inspectors shall make a special investigation into alleged abuses in any of such workshops whenever the governor shall so direct, and report the result of the same to the governor. It shall also be the duty of said inspector to enforce the provisions of this act, and to prosecute all violations of the same before any magistrate or any court of competent jurisdiction in the State."

Section 10 provides "that the following named sums or so much thereof as may be necessary, respectively, for the purposes hereinafter named, be, and are hereby, appropriated.

"First. Twenty thousand dollars for the salaries of inspector, assistant inspector and ten deputy inspectors, as hereinbefore provided.

"Second. The sum of eight thousand dollars to defray traveling expenses and other necessary expenses incurred by said inspector, assistant factory inspector, or deputy inspectors while engaged in the performance of their duties, not to exceed four thousand dollars in any one year."

The general rule is that, where an act includes two distinct subjects and both are expressed in the title, the whole act must be treated as void, under such a provision as section 13. because it is impossible to choose between the two subjects, and hold the act valid as to one and void as to the other. (Cooley on Const. Lim., 5th Ed., top page 178: Sutherland on Stat. Const., Sec. 103.) We are inclined to think that the body of the act does embrace two subjects. The factory inspectors, provided for in the act, must be regarded as State officers, or officers of the government.

Section 24 of article 5 of the constitution declares that "an office is a public position, created by the constitution or law, continuing during the pleasure of the appointing power; or for a fixed time, with a successor elected or appointed." The duties of the inspectors are continuing, and are prescribed by statute, and not by contract, and some portion of the functions of government are committed to their charge. They seem to come within the definition of "officers," as given in the constitution, and as laid down in the decisions of this Court. (Bunn vs. The People, 45 Ill. 397; Wilcox vs. The People, 90 Ill. 186; The People vs. Morgan, 90 Ill. 558.)

The manifest intention of section 16 was to make the subject of appropriations for the pay of the members and officers of the legislature and for the salaries of the officers of the government, a separate and distinct subject for legislative action. In a bill making appropriations for those objects, every provision is unconstitutional which proposes to do anything besides making such appropriations. (14 Fla. 284.) If the act of 1893 was strictly a general appropriation bill to pay the legislature and for the salaries of the officers of the government, everything else in it would be void. But it is not such a bill. Certainly its title does not indicate that it is such a bill. Its body contains a provision appropriating money for the payment of the factory inspector and his or her deputy and assistants. This provision is merely subordinate and subsidiary to the main puppose of regulating the manufacture of clothing, wearing apparel and other articles.

In order to make the act void under the constitutional prohibition contained in section 13, the two subjects must not only be contained in the body of the act, but must also be expressed in its title. We do not think we would be justified in holding that two subjects or objects are expressed in the title of the act of 1893. Courts always give a liberal and not a hypercritical interpretation to this restriction. All matters are properly included in the act which are germane to the title. The constitution is obeyed if all the provisions relate to the one subject indicated in the title, and are parts of it, or incident to it, or reasonably connected with it, or in some reasonable sense auxiliary to the object in view. It is not required that the subject of the bill shall be specifically and exactly expressed in the title, or that the title should be an index of the details of the act. Where there is doubt as to whether the subject is clearly expressed in the title, the doubt should be resolved in favor of the validity of the act. An act to incorporate a city may contain provisions for the raising of revenue for its government. An act "concerning drainage" may include assessments upon lands benefited to pay the expense. (Suth. on Stat. Const., Secs. 82, 85, 86, 88, 92 to 96; Johnson vs. The People, 83 Ill. 431.)

the main subject or purpose expressed in the title, the regula-Here tion of the manufacture of the articles therein named, the appointment tion of the manufacture of the articles therein named, the appointment of inspectors for the enforcement of such regulations, and the making of "an appropriation therefor," are germane to the main subject, and a part of it. They merely amplify the subject, and are incidental and auxiliary to the object contemplated by it. The title of the act not only does not mention the pay of the legislature and the salaries of the government officers, but it does not mention the salaries of the inspec-tors. The word "therefor" does not necessarily imply that the appro-priation is for the salaries of the inspectors. Non constat, so far as the title expresses to the contrary, that the inspectors were not to act with-out salaries. The title can well be interpreted as referring to the ex-penses of enforcing the legislation provided for, such as traveling ex-penses, the expenses attendant upon gathering information, and making penses, the expenses attendant upon gathering information, and making investigations, and reporting to the Governor, and prosecuting violations. of the act by employing counsel or otherwise. It does not follow that "a specific provision for the payment of expenses, necessary, proper, inci-dental or growing out of a law itself, or which may be deemed needful in carrying it or its subject into execution would not be valid, because such a provision, being matter properly connected with the subject of the law as expressed in the title would not be prohibited by the title, (14 Flor. Report, 287.) If it were not for section 16 it might be said that the salaries of the inspectors were a necessary expense incidental to the execution of the law, and properly included in the title, though not expressly named therein. But sections 16 and 13 are in the same article of the Constitution, and both use the word "subject," which evidently has the same meaning in each. The question, therefore, whether the matter of the salaries of State officers is an independent subject, is not a matter of construction, because the Constitution itself, by the language used in section 16, defines and sets apart appropriations for such salaries as a subject which is distinct and separate from all others. and cannot be included in any other. The de sign of that section was to enable the people to see clearly what and how much compensation their servants are receiving, without being confused by a commingling of outside matters with appropriations therefor.

We are inclined to think that the second clause of section 10 of the act, appropriating "twenty thousand dollars for the salaries of Inspector, Assistant Inspector and ten Deputy Factory Inspectors, as hereinbefore provided," is a subject embraced in the act which is not expressed in the title, and must therefore be regarded as void under the provision in the second sentence of section 13. It is true that the clause only makes an appropriation for the salaries of one class of State officers, and is not a general appropriation for the pay of the legislature and for the salaries of all the officers of the government. But it was the intention of section 16 that the salary of each of such officers, as well as all of them collectively, should be provided for by appropriations in a separate bill, standing by itself and apart from any provision on any other subject. The mandate of the Constitution, as embraced in that section, cannot be violated by passing separate bills making separate and distinct appropriations for the salaries of particular officers of the government or of particular classes of government officers, and embodying in such separate bills provisions on other subjects than the appropriations so made.

Our conclusion is, that section 5 of the act of 1893 and the first clause of section 10 thereof are void and unconstitutional for the reasons here stated. These are the only portions of the act which have been attacked by the argument of counsel. No reason has been pointed out why they are not distinct and separate from the balance of the act. The rule is that, where a part of a statute is unconstitutional, the remainder will not be declared to be unconstitutional also, if the two are distinct and separable, so that the latter may stand though the former becomes of no effect. (C., B. & Q. R. R. Co. vs. Jones, 149 III. 361.)

We do not wish to be understood by anything herein said as holding that section 5 would be invalid if it was limited in its terms to females who are minors.

The judgment of the Criminal Court of Cook county is reversed, and the cause is remanded to that court, with directions to dismiss the prosecutions.

Reversed and remanded.

APPENDIX B.

STATISTICAL STATEMENT.

The following tables present the statistical statement of work done by the inspectors from December 15, 1894, to December 15, 1895.

The towns and cities inspected during the year were Alton, Aurora, Batavia, BellevHle, Belvidere, Bloomington, Cairo, Canton, Centralia. Chicago, Decatur, DeKalb, Dixon, East St. Louis, Elgin, Freeport, Fulton, Galena, Geneva, Genoa, Granite City, Hanover, Jacksonville, Joliet, « Kewanee, LaSalle, Lincoln, Lockport, Madison, Mendota, Moline, Morrison, Mound City, Ottawa, Pecatonica, Pekin, Peoria, Peru, Princeton, Rock Falls, Rockford, Rock Island, St. Charles. Springfield, Sterling, Streator, Sycamore, Vandalia-48 in all. The tables upon Chicago manufactures have precedence, and these are given by trades.

No report is made in these tables upon establishments visited during the year and found not working. Nor is any record made of the different visits to the same establishment. although it was found necessary to inspect many of the manufactories and workshops once a month. The figure 4,540, given in the summary table as the total number of places inspected during the year, must not be taken as indicating the total number of inspections; as many of these 4,540 places were inspected from 5 to 12 times each, during the year.

The number of employes credited to each establishment is the highest number found at work in that establishment at any time during the year. Affidavits were demanded by the inspectors for the 8,624 children to show that they were of legal age to work, i. e., over 14 years; unless such affidavits were produced, discharge of the children followed; and, where the circumstances required it, prosecution of the employers.

The tables show the number of establishments coming under the law. by trades and by towns; the number of girls between 14 and 16 years of age; the number of boys between 14 and 16 years of age; the number of females over 16 years; the number of males over 16 years; the total number of children; and the total number of employes.

The summary tables which close this statistical statement show, by trades, the number of establishments inspected, and the number of em ployes found at work in them, in 1895; the same for 1894; and the increase in 1895 over 1894.

I

REPORT OF INSPECTORS OF FACTORIES AND WORK-SHOPS.

To His Excellency, JOHN P. ALTGELD, Governor of Illinois:

In accordance with section 9 of the act creating this office, I have the honor to lay before you, on behalf of the inspectors, the fourth annual report of work done; with such recommendations of additional legislation as three and a half years' experience in enforcing the law has shown to be urgently needed.

Mercantile institutions, laundries and offices not coming under the factory law, the work of the inspectors is limited to manufacturing establishments. The statistical tables show that in 1896 there have been inspected 6,707 factories and work-shops, in 63 cities and towns, employing 162,019 men, 30,781 women and 7,340 children, a total of 200,140 employés.

Of these 6,707 factories and work-shops, 2,378 are sweat-shops, em-/ploying 6,383 men, 7,181 women, 128 boys and 1,060 girls, a total of 14,752 employés.

The figure 6,707 does not indicate the total number of inspections made, as many places have been visited from five to twelve times each, and the number of inspections is therefore considerably larger than the number of places. Nor does the figure 6,707 include the factories and work-shops visited during the year, and found not working. Such factories and shops have been found in large numbers in 1896, especially outside of Cook county.

The figures concerning adults are furnished by employers from the pay-rolls; the children under 16 years are counted by the inspector, who makes demand upon the employer for an affidavit for each child between 14 and 16 years of age. Throughout this report the words men and women are to be understood as including all persons over 16, and the word children as embracing only those between 14 and 16 years of age. The Illinois factory law treats the working boy or girl over 16 as an adult. There is, therefore, nothing in the tables to show how large a part of the work of manufacture is carried on in Illinois by young people between the ages of 16 and 21 years. For this reason the proportion of adults to children in this report appears larger and more favorable than in the reports of inspectors in States in which minors under 18 years, or under 21 years of age, are separated from adult employés by protective provisions. The steady increase in the efficiency of the department is indicated by the following table:

	inspected.	employed.	employed.	employed.	employed.
1896	6, 707	162, 019	30, 781	7, 340	200, 140
1895	4, 540	151, 075	30, 670	8, 624	190, 369
Increase Decrease	2, 167	10, 944	111	1,284	9, 771
1896	6, 707	162,019	30, 781	7, 340	200, 140
1894	3, 440	97,600	24, 335	8, 130	130, 065
Increase Decrease	3, 267	64, 419	6, 446	790	70,075
1896	6, 707	162, 019	30, 781	7, 340	200, 140
1893	2, 362	52, 480	17, 288	6, 456	76, 224
Increase	4, 345	109, 539	13,493	884	123,916

Increase in Work Done.

Much of the time of the inspectors has been spent in obtaining evidence for prosecuting (in accordance with Sec. 9) violators of the law. The results are shown in the following

Summary of Convictions.

These convictions were obtained under the following charges:

Employing children under 14 years of age. Employing children under 16 years without affidavit. Employing children under 16 years without posting wall lists. Employing children under 16 years without keeping register. Employing children under 16 years without keeping register. Failure to produce list of shops in employ of manufacturer. Failure to produce list of home finishers in employ of contractor	471 41 86 111 1

The fact that 520 defendants have been convicted under 769 charges during 1896, compared with 327 defendants in 1895 convicted under 542 charges, does not indicate that there have been more violations during the present year, but that the department is in a position to fulfill more nearly the requirements of section 9 by prosecuting all violations.

A comparison of the Record of Convictions for 1896 (see Appendix B) with those of previous years shows that the large employers of children now comply with the law. The increase in the number of charges under which convictions have been obtained arises from the fact that brickyards and tenement house shops have been more effectively inspected than in any previous year, and the requirements of wall lists and register enforced.

The prosecutions are carried on by the Inspector, a method of procedure rendered possible only by the increasing efficiency of the Deputy Inspectors.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The factories and workshops in every city and town should be inspected, not once in a year or in two years, but as often as the effective enforcement of the law may require. With thousands of establishments in the State, the only hope of equitable enforcement of the statute lies in regular inspection of all of them, and in prompt and uniform prosecution of violations. In a State as large as Illinois, with widely scattered and rapidly growing industries, the present meagre appropriation for traveling expenses renders such inspection impossible.

Frequent inspections stimulate employers to keep affidavits, records and registers in order, and to look carefully to the age of the children employed; and, since deliberate, intentional violation of the law is now relatively rare, it seems probable that, if the inspectors were enabled to visit all the factories in the State at short intervals, the number of prosecutions might be materially reduced.

The present appropriation for traveling and other legitimate expenses of the department does not enable the inspectors to visit all the factories and work-shops in the State even once a year. Each year more establishments are visited; and 63 cities and towns have been reached in 1896. But the industries of Illinois continue to develop in many directions, notwithstanding the depression which has prevailed since 1893, and added provision for inspection should be made in proportion to this extension of manufacture.

The equipment of the inspectors in Illinois is much smaller than is usual in States which provide at all for factory inspectors. In Massachusetts there are 33 inspectors and the appropriation for 1896 was $63,500. In New York the department consists of 44 officers, and the appropriation for 1896 was $69,500. In Illinois there are but 12 inspectors, and the appropriation is but $10,000 for salaries and $4,000 for all other expenses.

FACTORY AND WORKSHOP LAW.

The sections of the statute which it is the duty of the Inspectors to enforce are as follows:

- 2 1. a Manufacture of certain articles of clothing prohibited in rooms in tenement houses used for eating and sleeping, except by families living therein.
 - b Every workshop to be kept clean. free from vermin, infectious or contagious matter, and shall be subject to inspection.
 - c Persons having control of workshops to report within fourteen days to board of health of locality.
- 2. Board of health or State inspector to examine workshops and goods; if found to be unhealthy or infectious, either may give such orders as the public health may require.
- 2 3. a Imported clothing and cigars reported in unhealthy condition, inspector to examine.
 - b If found to contain vermin or to be in unhealthy condition, report thereof to be made to board of health or inspector, orders to be made, board of health authorized to condemn or destroy.
- ¿ 4. a Unlawful to employ children under 14 years of age in any factory or workshop.
 - b Register to be kept of children under 16 years age; unlawful to employ children between the ages of 14 and 16 years unless affidavit of parent or guardian, or child is first placed on file, to be produced on demand of inspector.

- c The inspectors may demand certificates of physician as to physical ability of children: when may prohibit employment.
- ¿ 5. [Eight hours a day, forty-eight hours in a week, legal employment of female.]
- § 6. Printed notice of hours of labor, and list of names of children under 16 years of age to be kept posted in conspicuous place.
- ? a The terms "manufacturing establishment," "factory" and "workshop" defined.
 - b House, place or room used for any process of making goods deemed a workshop and subject to inspection.
 - c Every person, firm or corporation employing workshops required to keep a list of same, subject to inspection by board of health or inspector.
- Penalty for failing to comply with this act.

AN ACT to regulate the manufacture of clothiny, wearing apparel and other articles in this State, and to provide for the appointment of State inspectors to enforce the same, and to make an appropriation therefor.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That no room or rooms, apartment or apartments, in any tenement or dwelling house used for eating or sleeping purposes, shall be used for the manufacture, in whole or in part, of coats, vests, trousers, knee pants, overalls, cloaks, shirts, ladies' waists, purses, feathers, artificial flowers or cigars, except by the immediate members of the family living therein. Every such work-shop shall be kept in a cleanly state, and shall be subject to the provisions of this act; and each of said articles made, altered, repaired or finished in any such workshop shall be subject to inspection and examination, as hereinafter provided, for the purpose of ascertaining whether said articles, or any of them, or any part thereof, are in a cleanly condition and free from vermin and any matter of an infectious and contagious nature; and every person so occupying or having control of any work-shop as aforesaid shall, within fourteen days from the taking effect of this act, or from the time of beginning of work in any workshop as aforesaid, notify the board of health of the location of such work-shop, the nature of the work there carried on, and the number of the persons therein employed.

§ 2. If the board of health of any city or said State Inspector finds evidence of infectious or contagious diseases present in any work-shop, or in goods manufactured or in process of manufacture therein, and if said board or inspector shall find said shop in an unhealthy condition, or the clothing and materials used therein to be unfit for use, said board or inspector shall issue such order or orders as the public health may require, and the board of health are hereby enjoined to condemn and destroy all such infectious and contagious articles.

Whenever it shall be reported to said inspector or to the board of 83. health, or either of them, that coats, vests, trousers, knee pants, overalls, cloaks, shirts, ladies' waists, purses, feathers, artificial flowers or cigars are being transported to this State, having been previously manufactured in whole or in part under unhealthy conditions, said inspector shall examine said goods and the condition of their manufacture, and if upon such examination said goods, or any of them, are found to contain vermin, or to have been made in improper places or under unhealthy conditions, he shall make report thereof to the board of health, or inspector, which board or inspector shall thereupon make such order or orders as the public health shall require, and the board of health are hereby empowered to condemn and destroy all such articles.

No child under 14 years of age shall be employed in any manufacturð 4. ing establishment, factory or work shop within this State. It shall be the duty of every person, firm, corporation, agent or manager of any corporation employing children to keep a register in which shall be recorded the name, birthplace, age and place of residence of every person employed by him, them or it, under the age of 16 years; and it shall be unlawful for any per-son, firm or corporation, or any agent or manager of any corporation, to hire or employ in any manufacturing establishment, factory or work shop any child over the age of 14 years and under the age of 16 years unless there is first provided and placed on file an affidavit made by the parent or guardian, stating the age, date and place of birth of said child; if said child have no parent or guardian, then such affidavit shall be made by the child, which affidavit shall be kept on file by the employer, and which said register and affidavit shall be produced for inspection on demand by the inspector, assisrant inspector, or any of the deputies appointed under this act. The factory inspector, assistant inspector and deputy inspectors shall have power to demand a certificate of physical fitness from some regular physician in good standing in case of children who may appear to him or her physically unable to perform the labor at which they may be engaged, and shall have power to prohibit the employment of any minor who can not obtain such a certificate.

Every person, firm or corporation, agent or manager of a corporation, ð 6. employing any female in any manufacturing establishment, factory or work-shop, shall post and keep posted, in a conspicuous place in every room where such help is employed, a printed notice stating the hours for each day of the week between which work is required of such persons, and in every room where children under 16 years of age are employed a list of their names, ages and place of residence.

§ 7. The words "manufacturing establishment," "factory" or "work-shop," wherever used in this act, shall be construed to mean any place where goods or products are manufactured or repaired, cleaned or sorted, in whole or in part, for sale or for wages. Whenever any house, room or place is used for the purpose of carrying on any process of making, altering, repairing or finishing, for sale or for wages, any coats, vests, trousers, knee pants, overalls, cloaks, shirts, ladies' waists. purses, feathers, artificial flowers or cigars, or any wearing apparel of any kind whatsoever, intended for sale, it shall, within the meaning of this act, be deemed a work-shop for the purpose of inspection, and it shall be the duty of every person, firm or corporation to keep a complete list of all such work-shops in his, their or its employ, and such list shall be produced for inspection on demand by the board of health, or any of the officers thereof, or by the State inspector, assistant inspector, or by any of the deputies appointed under this act.

Pronounced unconstutional by the Supreme Court of Illinois, March 15, 1895.

§8 & 9. Any person, firm or corporation, who fails to comply with any provision of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not less three dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each offense. Said inspector, assistant inspector and deputy inspectors shall be empowered to visit and inspect, at all reasonable hours, and as often as practicable, the work-shops, factories and manufacturing establishments in this State where the manufacture of goods is carried on. And the inspectors shall report the result of the same to the Governor. It shall also be the duty of said inspector to enforce the provisions of this act, and to prosecute all violations of the same before any magistrate or any court of competent jurisdiction in the State.

NEED OF FURTHER LEGISLATION.

The gradual adoption of legislative measures for the protection of employés is the settled policy of the manufacturing States of this country. Fourteen States have established the office of Factory Inspector, viz.: Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan, Tennessee, Maryland, Connecticut, Maine, Minnesota, Illinois and Rhode Island.

The factory inspectors of Massachusetts have been at work for twenty years, and those of New York ten. In New Jersey, the department was created in 1883, and in Pennsylvania in 1889. The States most recently added to the list are Illinois in 1893 and Rhode Island in 1894.

In all the States which were pioneers in the adoption of factory legislation, the measures regarded as most urgently needed related to hours of labor and employment of children. It was afterwards found necessary to engraft upon these laws provisions relating to fire escapes, elevators, machine-guarding, investigating accidents, etc. The newer industrial States profited by the experience of the older ones, and incorporated these measures in their initial laws. In Illinois this course was taken in regard to tenement house manufacture only, some of the sweat-shop provisions having been borrowed outright from New York and Massachusetts. Unfortunately, provisions for ventilation, sanitation and safe-guarding are wholly absent from the Illinois law. They were not incorporated in the original statute, and nothing was added to it by the legislature of 1895.

The need of statutory provision for the protection of life, limb and health of employés in this State becomes more urgent from year to year, as their number increases. In the present year, in spite of the industrial depression, more than 200,000 men, women and children have been found at work in factories and work-shops.

In Massachusetts the work of factory inspectors includes the inspection of factories and public buildings, and employs, besides the chief, 31 inspectors and 2 clerks. The New York department embraces factories, work-shops and mines, and employs, besides the chief and assistant inspectors, 35 deputy inspectors, 3 clerks, 2 examiners an assistant examiner and a messenger. The functions of these departments include the regulation of the hours of labor of women and children, and the age, health and educational status of the children; the inspection of elevators, hoistways, machinery, heating, lighting, ventilation, sanitation and structure of buildings; the disposition of fire escapes, water closets and stairways, and the protection of the public health against infections arising from tenement house bakeries and shops. In New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio employment in laundries and mercantile establishments is also regulated by statute.

In deplorable contrast with these far-reaching and beneficent codes, the Illinois factory law contains but two sets of provisions (regulating child labor and tenement house manufacture). The law as originally enacted prohibited the employment of females longer than 8 hours in any one day, or 48 hours in any one week. The annulment of this section by the Supreme Court (Ritchie v. The People, March 15, 1895,) very seriously reduced the value of the statute.

The tables of this report show conclusively the effect of the rigid, enforcement of the two parts of the law which remain in force. The child labor provisions have reduced, both absolutely and relatively, the number of children employed in manufacture. Although the sections intended to regulate tenement house manufacture have been enforced with equal rigor, the tables upon sweat-shops show an increase in the number of tenement house shops from year to year, and the greatest increase in the last year. (See chapter on Tenement House Manufacture.)

The amendment to the constitution of Illinois providing for the admission of three amendments at one election, having failed of adoption, there is no prospect of any change in that instrument in the near future, such as might make it easier to enact legislation regarding the hours of labor of adult employés. Under the present constitution and the precedents of the Supeme Court, it seems, however, still possible to enact valid provisions for protecting the public from products of tenement house manufacture, and regulating the hours and conditions of work of children.

In preceding reports we have recommended the adoption of measures intended to meet the most urgent needs of the employés and the public, as shown by the facts set forth, and yet remain within the narrow limits assigned to legislation by recent decisions of the Supreme Court of Illinois, We, again, in accordance with section 9, offer the following

RECOMMENDATIONS.

CHILD LABOR.

1. That the provisions of the law be extended to mercantile institutions, offices and laundries.

2. That it be made unlawful to employ any child at any gainful occupation longer than eight hours in any one day or 48 hours in any one week, or before 6 a. m. or after 9 p. m.

3 That no child under 16 years of age be employed at any occupation dangerous to life and limb, health or morals; and that the presence of a child in a factory or workshop be made to constitute prima facie evidence of its employment.

4. That no child under sixteen years of age be permitted to work who cannot read and write simple sentences in the English language.

5. That all peddlers, vendors, newsboys, newsgirls and blootblacks under 16 years of age, be required to obtain licenses, and that none be licensed who are less than 14 years of age, or who cannot read and write simple English.

6. That no boy under 18 years of age be allowed to operate an elevator; and no minor be permitted to operate an elevator running at a speed of more than 200 feet a minute.

7. That two physicians be added to the staff of inspectors, a man and a woman; and that no health certificate except those granted by these physicians be valid.

8. That prosecution of parents who violate the law requiring children between the ages of 8 and 14 years to attend school be made, not as it now is, discretionary with local school boards, but mandatory upon them, as the prosecution of all violations of the factory law is now mandatory upon the Factory Inspector. (This is essential to the successful enforcement of Section 4 of the statutory law.)

SANITATION AND SAFEGUARDING.

9. That the inspectors be empowered to require ventilation, sanitation, lighting, heating, fire escapes, safeguarding machinery, elevators and well-holes; that employers be required to report to the Inspector within 24 hours after its occurrence, every accident upon their premises, and that failure of employers to provide the required safeguards be made a crime.

TENEMENT HOUSE MANUFACTURE.

10. That no article whatsoever, intended for sale, be manufactured in a tenement house, or in the rear of any tenement house.

APPROPRIATIONS.

11. That the appropriotion for traveling and other legitimate expenses of the inspectors be made $10,000 per year.

PENALTY CLAUSE.

12. That the penalty clause be amended to render it a misdemeanor to interfere with the inspectors in the performance of their duty.

13. That Section 8 be amended to contain the following clause:

Any person, and every member of any firm, and any agent or manager of a firm or corporation, employing persons or managing factories and workshops covered by this act, who, whether for himself or for such firm or corporation, ar by himself or through sub-agents or foremen, shall violate or fail to comply with any of the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than $3 nor more than $100 for each offense. And any corporation which, by its agents, officers or servants, shall fail to comply with or shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be liable to the same penalty, which may be recovered against said corporation in an action of debt or assumpsit brought before any court of competent jurisdiction.

CHILD LABOR.

The child labor provisions of the law have not been amended or altered since it was enacted in 1893, and apply only to manufacturing establishments, factories and workshops. Their object is to prohibit the employment of children under 14 years of age in manu-There is no provision for limiting the employment of facture. illiterate children, or safeguarding life and limb of those who have reached 14 years. The clause which provides for health certificates is nugatory. There is no restriction upon the hours of labor. When children 14 years old are equipped with age affidavits and health certificates, there is no power in any officer of the State to regulate the nature of the work selected for them, or the conditions under which the work is performed. They may be required to work all night, or seven days in the week, and in the most dangerous occupations.

The number of children between 14 and 16 years of age found by the inspectors at work in 1896 is 7,340, compared with 8,130 in 1894 and 8,624 in 1895. The actual decrease since 1895 is 1,284 children; 1,031 girls and 253 boys. In that year there were 45 children in the thousand employés; in 1896 there are 37 in the thousand. For the first time there is absolute an decrease, and the relative decrease is greater than before. This decrease is the more marked because the inspectors have covered in the present year 2,067 more establishments than ever before.

The percentage of children to total employés has again fallen conspicuously. In 1893 the percentage was 8.5; it 1894 it was 6.2; in 1895 it was 4.5; it 1896 it is 3.7. In 1893 the total number of persons found at work by the inspectors was 76,224, of whom 6,456 were children; in 1894 the total was 130,065, of whom 8,130 were chilren; in 1895 the total was 190,369, of whom 8,624 were children; in 1896 the total is 200,140, of whom 7,340 are children.

It may be thought the decrease in the number of children at work in manufacture is due only to dullness of trade; that men and women have taken the places of children. While this may be true to some expent, it is also true that the total number of employès found at work is larger in 1896 than in any previous year, and the number of children might, therefore, have been expected to increase, unless the enforcement of the law were really checking such increase. Indeed, it has usually been observed that more children are employed in periods of dull trade, their cheaper labor being preferred in the general reduction of expenses; and the poverty of parents compelling them to send children to work when the father is unemployed.

It seems reasonable to believe that the rigid enforcement of the law by prosecution of all violations, and the growing efficiency of the inspectors in finding workshops and detecting violations, have contributed largely to reduce the amount of child labor in the manfacturing industries of Illinois. This view is strengthened by the fact that the fines and costs paid by reason of 656 convictions of violations of child labor sections of the law amounted to $4,078.65 vin 1896.

Outside the stockyards and sweatshops the standard of size and health of the children employed improves. The change in this respect is conspicuous when a comparison is made with the children employed in laundries and department stores, where the minimal age is not yet prescribed by law.

The children found at work in factories and workshops in 1896 and 1895 were distributed as follows:

Distribution of Children.

In the report for 1895 it was shown that there were still factories where it was found profitable to employ large numbers of children while complying with the child labor sections of the law. A table was given of eight factories in which the number of children employed ranged from 503 to 105. These were the largest employers of children in the State. In six of the eight establishments more than 100 children were employed in 1894, and a still larger number in 1895. In 1896 only one of the eight employs more than a hundred children. There has been, it is true, a decrease also in the total number of employés in most of these establishments; but, except in one instance, the percentage of decrease in children is much greater than the percentage of decrease in total number employed, as is shown in the following table:

* The par cent. of decrease is calculated upon number of employés in 1896.

From these two tables it appears that one child in nine of all the children found at work in 1896 was in the employ of these eight companies; in 1894 and in 1895 this ratio was one child in seven.

These eight establishments are typical of all the large employers of children in the State. The company doctor makes health certificates where these are required; the company notary files the affidavits, which are duly kept on file; a competent clerk revises wall records and register from day to day. These arrangements are found to be worth while, because of the cheapness of the children's labor, and the profit to be derived from employing them in large numbers; yet the amount of work involved in the requirements of the law does, as has been shown, decrease the employment of children under 16 years of age in these establishments.

In consequence of the enforcement of these provisions, the employer is more observant of the child put to work, and children of better physique are employed. When the foreman has its name on the record and in the register, its health certificate and age affidavit on file, the child possesses a distinctly added value for him, as being sure not to involve him in a prosecution, and its services are more likely to be retained. The shifting about of children from day to day, to which attention was called in our first report, is thus somewhat checked in large factories, and there is some gain to the children from this beginning of stability in their work.

CHILDREN IN THE STOCK YARDS.

While the decrease in employment of children is distributed throughout the trades and occupations, none is found in 1896 at the stock yards, a place where no child should ever be employed. On the contrary, the number of girls (5) remains unchanged, and the boys are 242 in 1896, an increase of 5 over 1895.

There is no improvement in the conditions under which the children work, nor has any officer of the State power to require and prescribe any improvement. Nowhere is the failure of the State to protect the life, limb, health, morals and intelligence of the children more strikingly shown than at the stock yards.

CHILDREN IN GLASS WORKS.

Two of the six glass manufacturing companies in Illinois are the largest employers of children in 1896. This is shown by an inspection made during the second week in December, after the tables of the year's work were closed. According to the schedules of this latest inspection, the Illinois Glass Company at Alton employs 193 children, and the Streator Bottle and Glass Company at Streator 124 boys. The whole number of children in this trade at this inspection is 373, 56 being in the employ of four companies at East St. Louis, Belleville and Ottawa.

The Illinois Glass Company, still the largest employer of children in the State, now complies with the law. The number of its employes has grown from 1,800 in 1895 to 2,500 in December, 1896; and the number of children has fallen from 503 to 193. The youngest children have been replaced by a technical improvement, and the work is now done by boys not conspicuously below the average of working children, except in the case of a few who were already dwarfed by too early work before the law tock effect. These, who seemed at the first inspection to be not more than ten years old, are still at work but show no marked change of stature. Such dwarfing of children has not been found in any other industry, and enforcement of the law seems to have checked it here.

Nowhere in the State is the value of the law, even in its present inadequate form, more clearly shown than in glass works; and nowhere is the need more clearly shown of extending provisions which still fail to prohibit night work for boys just 14 years of age. No law is broken when boys run all night long in the heat of the glass furnaces, and then in the darkness of the early morning run over the ice and snow to their homes. The health certificate clause does not protect these children from burns and blindness inflicted while carrying red-hot rods along intersecting paths. It is quite possible that the further restriction of the employment of boys under 16 years of age in this industry might stimulate technical improvements; certainly the enactment of the Ohio prohibition of the employment of children at occupations dangerous to life, limb, health or morals would facilitate the release of boys from the worst phases of the glass industry.

CHILDREN IN SWEAT-SHOPS.

The garment trades, in which women and children outnumber men as 17 to 11, are the most demoralized trades in the State, though they form one of the four leading manufacturing industries, and employ 29,431 persons (not including the thousands of women who work alone at home, of whom it has never been possible to make any census). While the average in all trades is 45 children to one thousand males over 16 years of age, in these trades the number of children rises to 152 to one thousand; in the sweat-shops the proportion is still greater, being 186 children to the thousand, and the conditions under which the children work are incomparably worse. For every seven men at work in the garment trades there is a child at work; in the sweat-shops there is a child for every five men.

The effort to enforce the child labor sections is more arduous and less fruitful in the sweat-shops than elsewhere. Thus, while the number of children engaged in manufacture in Illinois has decreased by 1,284 since December, 1895, in the sweat-shops the decrease has amounted to but 121 children. There are still 1,060 girls and 128 boys in sweat-shops, one in six of all the children employed in manufacture. In 1895 this ratio was one in seven; in 1894 it was but one in eleven. It increases from year to year, in spite of persistent prosecution of sweaters for violation of the child labor provisions. Only the man who has already paid a fine really believes that he cannot with impunity violate the law.

In 1896 sweaters were convicted under 213 child labor charges, as follows: Employing 17 children under 14 years of age; 126 children under 16 years of age without affidavit; 46 failures to keep register; 24 failures to post wall list. The fines and costs paid under these convictions amounted to $1,329.20.

There is no hope of a considerable reduction in the number of children employed in sweat-shops under the present provisions of the statute. The sweaters are so irresponsible, so shifting and so numerous, that no small body of inspectors can adequately follow them up, with parents and employés conniving to evade and violate the law, and the board of education declining to enforce the compulsory education law by prosecutions.

Under the conditions of tenement house manufacture, sweaters are constrained to employ the cheapest possible labor, and their settled policy is to hire children and take the risks. Nothing less than the abolition of tenement house manufacture will, in the opinion of the inspectors, entirely abolish the employment of children in sweatshops. This employment could, however, be reduced by the adoption of the New York requirement that the child must be able to read and write simple English before going to work; and the Ohio prohibition of the employment of children under conditions dangerous to health, life, limb or morals.

CHILDREN IN OCCUPATIONS NOT UNDER THE LAW.

Official records of the employment of children afford proof that it decreases wherever restricted by an enforced statute; and a very little observation will show that it is increasing where it is not under legal restriction. The number of children in the work-shops and factories is less year by year, since such employment has been regulated by statute. There are, in work-shops and factories in Chicago, 5,830 children under 16 years, a decrease of about a thousand since 1895, when the number was 6,757. There is no census of the children employed in the city in other gainful occupations, but they certainly number several thousand. In considering the need of farther protective legislation for working children, the fact should not be lost sight of that they are flocking into occupations wholly without legal restriction. Among children found in unregulated employments are newsboys and newsgirls, bootblacks, street peddlers, office boys, telegraph and messenger boys, laundry girls, and children in mercantile occupations.

Peddlers of fruit, flowers, and other wares, may work at any age, and do begin work at five and six years. They may ply their calling at any hour and in any place, and they are found on street corners and in saloons, at midnight and later. In street occupations the little girl is crowding out the boy, and she is succeeding better because she is a girl. The principal of a Chicago primary school is losing the brightest girls from the rooms in her charge because they are sent out to peddle these small wares; work which had been done by boys until within a couple of years. An employé of the Board of Education counted 42 little girls between the Auditorium hotel and the city hall at 2 o'clock one morning.

There should be provision by statute for stringent supervision of street occupations for children. We therefore recommend that all juvenile peddlers and vendors be required to obtain licenses; that none be licensed under the age of 14 years, and that the officer issuing the license be empowered to withhold it, for sufficient reason, until the applicant shall have passed the 18th birthday.

Everything connected with laundry work makes it an occupation for the rugged and fully matured only; the heat and dampness, intensified by lack of ventilation; the sharp contrast of temperature at close of work; the long, irregular hours; the unprotected shafting; the heavy work at dangerous machines-all menace health, life and limbs, of the weak and unwary. Until very recently children were not found in this industry; but little girls are now employed in large numbers in some of the laundries in Chicago, and such employment is rapidly increasing. Complaints are frequently made to the factory inspectors concerning these young children in laundries by persons who do not know that the title of the factory law restricts its operation to manufacturing establishments. Sometimes the complaint takes the form of notification that an inspection of a specified laundry will show children 7 to 10 years old at work. Again, a mother seeks to have the inspector interfere with the overwork of her child, the complaint being that the child does not get home from work until after midnight. A letter, unsigned perhaps, gives notice that a child has been maimed while tending a mangle, or tells of one falling insensible from exhaustion, as did seven girls one day last August, in a cellar laundry where they were working in a temperature of 118 degrees.

The steam laundry has developed all the conditions of a manufacturing plant; it should be open to the same inspection, and under as careful statutory regulation. The presence of children of tender years in laundries should be prohibited. We recommend that the minimal age for work in stores, offices and laundries be made 14 years, as it now is in factories and work-shops, and that the age affidāvit be required for all children under 16 years of age.

A bill drawn in accordance with recommendations of this department, providing for such regulation, was introduced in the 39th General Assembly. It did not reach a third reading, but on the last day of the special session the House created a Commission to investigate the conditions of child labor, and report to the next legislature. Representative Bryan, of the Fourteenth district, chairman of the Commission, asked the coöperation of the Civic Federation of Chicago; and a committee appointed by the Industrial committee of the Federation investigated the conditions of employment of children in the dry goods stores of this city. The text of the report of this committee to the Child Labor Commission is, with permission of Col. Bryan, 'reproduced here. It is as follows:

-----C'HILDREN IN THE DRY GOODS STORES OF C'HICAGO.

In the last weeks of December, 1895, the committee endeavored to secure from managers of department stores the names and residences of the younger children then in their employ. The effort was not successful, the managers making the reasonable objection that every one was working at full pressure to meet the holiday demands, and no competent person could be spared to make the lists. The members of the committee were invited to call again later. Some lists were secured at this time, but none from stores in which children are employed in great numbers.

During January, 1896, lists were secured of the children then at work in 14 stores. Only one of these lists gave also the names of the extra children employed during the holidays. From the managers of the 14 stores the committee received the names and addresses of 1,310 children. In February and March visits were made to the homes of 302 of these children.

In selecting the names of the children whose homes were to be visited, the only rule observed was to take as many as possible from one neighborhood, in order to save the time of the visitor; but the visits were so arranged as to include children from every store giving a list. The visitors were furnished with printed schedules, and the information sought through a uniform set of questions was: 1. age of child at leaving school and beginning work; 2, present wage and wage during holidays; 3, carfare and other outlay necessitated by the work; 4, fines, how much and for what causes; 5, if seats were furnished; 6, condition of child's family-how many members, how many at work, and if father was working. No attempt was made to ascertain the number of children at work in all the dry goods stores of the city, although such census would have value. In this respect the committee has dealt only with general, typical conditions; and it is believed that they offer the basis for a fair generalization as to the condition of all the children at work in all the dry goods stores of Chicago.

The information contained in the schedules is tabulated by places of employment, and from these tables by stores summary tables are made, the basis for division into groups being the hours of employ-new ment, as follows: A, stores which limit the working day the year round to 9 hours; B, stores which increase the working day during OMA the holiday season to 14 and 15 hours; C, stores where the hours vary lfrom 10 to 14 per day, every workday in the year. (The tables are appended hereto).*

Group A, 3 stores; hours of work usually 9, during holiday season 94, Saturday half-holiday in summer. Numer of names furnished, 265; visits made 55, 18 girls, 37 boys. Wages paid: 31 children, $2.25 per week; 20 children, $2.50 per week; 3 children, $3 per week; on payroll less than a week, 1 child. Seats furnished, and children permitted to sit when not busy.

Group B, 8 stores; hours of work usually 9½, prolonged during holiday weeks to 12, 13, 14, 15. Names furnished, 944; visits made, 213, 177 girls, 36 boys. Wages paid: 4 children, $1.75 per week; 94 children, $2; 21 children, $2.25; 84 children, $2.50; 5 children, $3; on payroll less than a week, 5 children. No instance was discovered where extra pay was given for extra hours. In one store of the eight $2 extra was given on Christmas eve to each child who had been in the store a year or more. The stores furnish, or pay for. the child's suppers during holiday weeks. In one of the eight stores children are permitted to sit down when not busy; in two others there are seats in departments where there are not many children; in the remaining five stores the children are not permitted to sit at all. The tables show that most of the children in these stores reached home after midnight during holiday weeks; and that over threefourths of these children were girls.

Group C. 3 stores: hours of work 14 and 15 during holiday weeks: at all other times 14 hours on four days and 10 hours on two days per week (including time allowed for dinner and supper). Number of names furnished, 102; visits made, 34-26 girls, 8 boys. Wages paid: 19 children $2 per week; 6 children $2.25; 4 children $2.50; 1 child $3; on payroll less than a week, 4 children. In these stores children are not permitted to sit down, but when not otherwise busy are required to wash windows and perform other work beyond their years and strength. They go home for dinner and supper, but the time allowed is often cut to 20 minutes. While stores of the type of Group C do not employ many chilren each, there are many such stores scattered through the city, and the aggregate of children employed in them is large.

The tables by stores show that in 54 of the families visited the child was the only person at work. In only 144 cases—less than 50 per cent.—was the father, the natural breadwinner, at work. In 54 cases the father was dead, killed at his work in three cases. In 35cases the father was sick or otherwise disabled; 8 of the 35 had been permanently disabled at their work. In 52 cases fathers out of work were unable to obtain it. In 10 cases fathers had deserted families.

^{*} For these very valuable tables see Report of Hon. Charles P. Bryan, Chairman Child Commission, presented to the 40th Legislature.

In 7 cases fathers were reported out of work, and the reason not given. The number of persons in families ranged from 2 to 13, and the average to the family was between 7 and 8 persons.

While it is clear that poverty has driven these children into stores when they should be in school, it is equally clear that their earnings are a meagre contribution to the maintenance of the family; and in no case effectively lift the family out of pauperism. These tables prove, what all investigations of child labor show, that the family dependant upon the earnings of the child is dependant also upon other sources. A summary of the wages shows: 4 children receive $1.75 per week; 113 receive $2; 58 receive $2.25; 108 receive $2.50; 9 receive $3; 10 were on payroll less than a week—total, 302.

From these wages 182 children are obliged to deduct car fare, by reason of the long distance between our First ward stores and the homes which the poor can afford. Sixty-six children do not use the cars. Of these many who work in the First ward walk four to six miles a day in addition to the incessant running of the working hours. Only 33 ride at school-childrens' rate, 36 cents a week; while 11 others report that "conductors sometimes take 3 cents and sometimes 5 cents." The full fare of 60 cents a week is paid by 138 of the 302 children. By this car-fare the net wage of children receiving $2 and $2.50 per week, the largest wage paid any considerable number, is reduced to $1.40, $1.50, $1.90 per week. The prevalent system of fining still further reduces the child's wage.

It must also be pointed out that the weekly wage seldom extends to 52 weeks in the year, and the child's real contribution to the family maintenance is even less than it at first appears. The 1,310 children whose names were furnished by the 14 mercantile houses may be considered typical of the permanently employed, as they were upon the pay-roll after the readjustment following the close of the holiday trade. Not quite 60 days elapsed between the receipt of the last list and the making of the last visit; yet the visitors found 31 of the 302 children-more than 10 per cent.-already out of work. Of these 19 had been laid off or definitely discharged on account of sickness. Of the 12 discharged for other reasons 6 had found other work, and 6 were still seeking it. One boy had had two weeks work in the 16 months since leaving school, and another 8 months work in 18 months. The fines if often incurred, and they are likely to be, lead to suspension. Children complained, too, of getting "vacations" without pay on days when trade promises to be light; although they must report on time every morning.

All that can be said in defense of the employment of the hundreds of children in the dry goods stores of Chicago whose work is steadiest is, that they add a few dollars a month, for a part of the year, to the family receipts. The number of children demoralized by securing a few days' employment in the stores during the holidays is much greater, and the wage they receive is too insignificant to be reckoned. While managers of 14 stores gave lists containing names of 1,310 children at work in January, experts counted the children employed in four department stores during Christmas week and the number ran from 1,200 to 1,400, the largest number on the day preceding Christmas. Some of these children received 32 cents net for two days' work, the limit of their employment. This working for a week or less is most mischievous. The inexperience of the child throws a glamor over work and wage, and the routine of the schoolroom seems stupid by contrast. The child, who knows nothing of market conditions, is led by the few days' work to waste weeks in seeking another place, which is not to be found. Absence from school during these weeks effectually destroys all good results of what is likely to be, in any event, the child's last year in school. The cutting off of the school life by this unfruitful search for work begins, with a vast number of children, very soon after the twelfth birthday is passed.

The tables show that the 302 children began work as follows: At 13 years or under, 90; at 14, or between 13 and 14 years, 172; after 14th birthday was passed, 23; at age unknown, 17. Of the 302 children 221 were girls, 81 boys; nearly 3 girls to 1 boy.

The very general belief that the child's wage supports, or materially contributes towards supporting the family, is the basis of much of the opposition to legislative restriction of the work of children. These tables show that such belief is not sustained by the facts. Only 9 children out of the 302 visited earned $3 per week, the highest wage shown in the table. If they worked every working day in the year and paid neither car fare nor fines, they would receive $156 each for the full year's work. The tables show how far below this sum the average wage falls, and the reasons.

The vital reason for legislative restriction of child labor is, however, not connected at all with the question of the child's wage. The reason is the injury to the child from too early employment, an injury manifest at every turn to those who seriously investigate such employment. Physical breakdown, sapping of moral energy, stunting of wage-earning capacity, result from premature work. If society suffers children to work prematurely, society must pay the penalty when the child becomes dependent upon it in matured years.

In forwarding this report to the Child Labor Commission, the Industrial Committee of the Civic Federation recommended that a law be enacted by the 40th General Assembly which should (1) prohibit the employment of children under 14 years of age in mercantile occupations; (2) regulate the employment of children between the ages of 14 and 16 years, by means of age affidavits and health certificates, as now required in manufacturing establishments; (3) limit the hours of labor of children. The committee farther recommended that the enforcement of the law should be made the duty of the factory inspection department.

HOURS OF LABOR OF CHILDREN.

In all manufacturing industries, including occupations not in themselves injurious, it is observed that general conditions are worst where children are employed in greatest numbers. The hours of labor are no exception to this rule. When, therefore, the restriction of the factory law upon the hours of labor was set aside by the Supreme Court, it was upon children and young girls that the decision fell most heavily.

Overtime work everywhere increases the injuries resulting from too early and unfit employment. The children in street occupations. the cash girls and laundry girls, the messenger and telegraph boys. are precociously familiar with the night side of life in a great city. The boys and girls in sweatshops, exhausted by excessive labor before a short day's work is done, must still toil on throughout long hours when the "rush" season is on; and it cannot be doubted that the seeds of death and disabling disease are often sown in these hours of forced labor, after exhausted nature has ceased to struggle against the unwholesome environment. During the "rush" season the only limit to the hours of labor is literally that set by the worker's power of endurance. The sweater does not go to bed at night, but throws himself upon the floor or cot, to sleep an hour at a time, when he can no longer stand; men and women work at the machines until they fall asleep over them, and in some cases till they faint from exhaustion. The working day of 14 hours is the rule, and only the most tenacious workers are found worth the room they occupy when the season is at its height. Older employés are crowded out because they cannot keep up the pace, and in this trade men are old at 35. and superannuated at 40 years.

The failure to restrict the hours of children's work makes still more dangerous the work of little lads in glass furnaces, where they hurry to and fro through the night in the heat of the furnaces and go out, hot and exhausted, into the cold air of the winter morning. It is in the hours added to the normal day that the greatest danger of injury by machinery arises. It has been pointed out to the inspectors that the machines in a stamping factory do not necessarily mutilate children, because "the children never get hurt until along toward night, when they get careless;" in other words, until they are worn out by too-long continuous toil, and have consequently lost the power of attention.

 $$ In considering the hours of labor of children account must be taken of the time spent in going to and from work. The report upon children in the dry goods stores shows that, during holiday weeks, they reached home after midnight. Many of the children employed in canning establishments and pickle factories are obliged to rise at 4 o'clock in order to reach the factory before work begins. The walk to their work is in itself an undue exercise for children of their years and strength, and is followed by a work-day which extends far into the night.

For canneries, as for garment shops, the excuse for a day of 14 and 16 hours is that the season is short, and every possible hour must be seized upon for work. Surely the time has gone by when overwork or premature work of children could be justified on this plea.

When the Supreme Court declared the eight-hours section of the factory law unconstitutional, it left no limit upon the hours of labor; and the child's working day may be extended not only to the common limit of 10 hours, but to 14, 16 or 20 hours. In handing down its decision, however, the Court suggests that a statute to fix the working day of children would not be unconstitutional. The issue in Ritchie vs. The People was upon a law restricting the hours of work of all females employed in manufacture, and the Court held that this was in excess of the powers of the legislature; but, say the Court:

We do not wish to be understood by anything herein said as holding that section five [the eight-hours section] would be invalid if it was limited in its terms to females who are minors.

Throughout the decision the contention was concerning females only; and hence the word "female" appears in this proposition. It is reasonable to assume, however, that the intimation conveyed, that the hours of labor for young girls may be fixed by law, applies equally to male minors. We therefore recommend the enactment of an eighthours law for children of both sexes; and that the employment of any child at any occupation between the hours of 9 p. m. and 6 a. m. be prohibited.

THE MEDICAL CERTIFICATE.

Many of the evils pointed out in these reports as incident to child labor could be modified if the medical certificate clause of the factory law were effective. This clause, the last in section 4, reads:

The factory inspector, assistant inspector and deputy inspectors shall have power to demand a certificate of physical fitness from some regular physician in good standing in case of children who may appear to him or her physically unable to perform the labor at which they may be engaged, and shall \checkmark have power to prohibit the employment of any minor that can not obtain such a certificate.

Under this authority it ought to be possible for inspectors to obtain the discharge (1) of all children deformed or diseased, and (2) of any child found at a dangerous machine or in a markedly unwholesome shop; although the decision as to the condition of the child, or as to the child's ability to continue work without injury at any specified employment, does not rest with the inspector, but with a physician.

In the first months after the law took effect, this department offered j free examinations to all children for whom health certificates were required. Dr. Bayard Holmes, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and Dr. Josephine Milligan, of Hull House, gave their services, visiting the place of employment, watching the child at work, and making the examination, during which the child was weighed with and without clothing, had eyes and ears tested; heart, lungs, skin, spine, joints, nails examined, and forty measurements taken. In this thorough manner 135 children were examined by the two physicians. Seventy-two certificates were issued, and in the remaining 63 cases, 53 children were prohibited work, and 10 were forbidden to work at tobacco stripping, stamping machines, knife-grinding and in sweat-shops.

The saving work thus attempted was unhappily nullified by the fact that a child forbidden work by one physician has only to search long enough to find some ignorant or unscrupulous practitioner, who will issue a certificate. It was said in our report for 1893:

The value of this provision of the law depends upon the intelligent coöperation of the medical profession; tor, if the certificates are granted merely pro forma, upon the representation of the employer or of the child, the object of the law is nullified. The physician who grasps the situation, and appreciates the humane intent of the law, will always find time to visit the factory and see under what conditions the child is working. Otherwise the certificate may be worse than valueless, and may work a positive injury to a child whom the inspectors are trying to save from an injurious occupation.

The health certificate provision has failed for the reason then set forth. When a certificate is demanded for a child, a scrupulous employer discharges the child, and it is next found in a worse place, armed with one; an unscrupulous employer sees that the child obtains one, and an inspector following up the case finds the certificate on file, and can proceed no farther. The daily experiences of the inspectors painfully impress upon them their powerlessness to better the condition of children at work, or to remove the children from work which endangers life, limb or health.

Arsenical paper and rotten paste sicken the child in the paper box factory, nicotine poisons the child working in tobacco, but the inspector can neither require ventilation of the shop or factory, nor order discharge of the child from it; nor may the inspector interfere with employment of a child where its hand is stained with cheap, mercurial gilding which induces paralysis. Long hours and bad sanitation combine to destroy the health of the child in sweatshop, bakeshop, and laundry, but the inspector cannot order sanitary improvements, or prevent the employment of the child after a health certificate has been obtained for it. The child runs an elevator, or works about it, or feeds a buzz-saw or stamping machine, and the inspector cannot intervene.

So long as health certificates are issued by charitable dispensaries gratis to all comers, so long as company doctors prepare them in bulk for all the children employed in factories where dangerous conditions of work necessitate a physician's regular employment, so long as practitioners abound who care more for a fee ranging from 25 cents to $2 than for the honorable traditions of their profession, so long—as was pointed out by the inspectors in 1893—the medical certificate provision of the factory law is valueless.

To render this provision in fact what it is in intent, we again recommend that two physicians be appointed regular inspectors in this department, and that the issuance of health certificates be restricted to them.

EDUCATION.

The educational status of the children found at work shows no improvement. From garment and cigar shops children are still taken into court as witnesses in factory cases who speak no English, some of them having lived several years in the State, in dense foreign colonies; and going to school, if at all, where English is not taught.

The compulsory school law remains a dead letter, no prosecution ever having been undertaken, so far as is known to this department, for its enforcement by any Board of Education. The weakness of its provisions continues to serve as excuse for continued failure to prosecute parents for violating it.

It is therefore still the unpleasant duty of the inspectors to prosecute employers for hiring children under 14 years of age, in violation of the factory law, while parents go unpunished who have sought employment for the child in violation of both the school and the factory law. It is manifestly unfair to let parents go unpunished who share with employers the responsibility for this illegal work, and who should be held responsible under the compulsory attendance law, as manufacturers are held under the factory law. This duty properly devolves upon both the inspectors and the local school authorities, and neither can perform it effectively alone.

Until there are schools for the children, and a compulsory education law that is enforced, the factory inspectors cannot keep all the children under 14 years out of factories and workshops. While an effective factory law is the best possible supplement to a good compulsory education law, neither can take the place of the other; and the attempt to enable the factory inspectors to do the work of truant officers can never be successful.

The text of the compulsory education law is published here to show how closely it interlocks with the child labor provisions of the factory law.

AN ACT concerning the education of children.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois represented in the General Assembly: That every person having control of any child between the ages of seven (7) and fourteen (14) years, shall annually cause such child to attend for at least sixteen (16) weeks, twelve weeks of which attendance shall be consecutive, some public or private day school: Provided, that this act shall not apply in any case where the child has been or is being otherwise instructed for a like period of time in the elementary branches of education, or whose physical or mental condition renders his or her attend-ance impracticable or inexpedient, or who is excused for sufficient rescense hy ance impracticable or inexpedient, or who is excused for sufficient reasons by any competent court of record.

§ 2. For every willful neglect of such duty as prescribed by section one (1) of this act, the person so offending shall forfeit to the use of the public schools of the city, town or district in which such child resides, a sum not less than one dollar ($1) nor more than twenty dollars ($20) and costs of suit.

§ 3. The board of education in cities, towns, villages and school districts, and the board of school directors in school districts may, at their discretion, appoint one or more proper persons, whose duty it shall be to report all violations of this act in writing to such board of education or board of directors, whose duty it shall be, when in their opinion the evidence renders such action necessary, to notify in writing the parent or guardian that such complaint has been made, and if cause be not shown within five (5) days, to at once proceed against the responsible person as is hereby provided. It shall also be the duty of said board of education in cities, towns, villages and school districts and boards of school directors in school districts, to appoint one of their number, who shall be a discreet and proper person, whose duty it shall be to hear excuses and reasons of parents or guardians for the non-attendance of children at school and to report in writing to said boards of education or boards of directors at the next regular or special meeting the names, ages and postoffice addresses of all persons prosecuted under the provisions of this act. The persons appointed as such officers shall be entitled to such compensation for services under this act as shall be determined by the boards appointing them, and which compensation shall be paid out of the distributable school fund.

§ 4. Any fine and penalty mentioned in this act may be sued for and recovered before any court of record or justice of the peace of the proper county in the name of the People of the State of Illinois for the use of the public schools of the city, town, village or district in which said child resides.

§ 5. Any person having control of a child, who, with intent to evade the provisions of this act, shall make a willful[ly] false statement concerning the age of such child or the time such child has attended school, shall for such offense forfeit a sum of not less than $3 nor more than $20 for the use of public schools for such city, town, village or district.

APPROVED June 19, 1893.

In manufacturing centers there is the same lack of school accommodations to which attention has been called in previous reports, as one great reason for the illiteracy prevailing among working children in this State.

In Chicago, the City Council has taken a distinctly retrograde step in reducing the school appropriations by $2,000,000 for 1896–97, thus checking the building of school houses, and depriving thousands of working class children of the opportunity for school life which primary schools are supposed to extend to all alike. That the working children are thus vitally affected, the report of the Chicago Board of Education for 1896 shows.

Mr. D. R. Cameron, president of the Board, says: "The number of sittings owned by the Board has increased during the past year 14.519, an equivalent of 16, 20-room school buildings. The total enrollment of pupils in our schools during the year 1894-5 was 201,380, and for the year 1895-6 reached the aggregate of 215.784 pupils, an increase of 14,404; whereby, it will be noted, the number of new sittings for this last year exceeded the additional enrollment of pupils by 115, not a great gain, yet a gain, This is a most satisfactory showing, for, so far as my knowledge extends, it is the first time in years that the work of this important committee (Buildings and This Grounds) has outrun the increase of school membership. gratifying record might have become a reasonable hope for the future had not the Common Council so seriously crippled the work of the Board by a reduction of $2,000,000 from its resources for the year 1896-7.

The serious crippling of this department must re-act in adverse ways and meet its compensation in increased exenditure for police, judicial and penal institutions. The whole policy of a government is summed up in the requirement, educate or punish. To cheapen one is to multiply the cost of the other by a large ratio. The schools are our social and political safeguards, especially so when, in our cosmopolitan population, we are confronted not so much with the question of educating a homogeneous people, but with the far more difficult problem of providing educational facilities for children of every nationality under the sun."

The committee on Buildings and Grounds reports: "We have reduced the number of children in half-day divisions from 20,000 in in September, 1895 to 15,708 in June, 1896.  *  But it must be borne in mind that we have, besides those children in half-day divisions about 11,700 others in rented rooms, just as many as we had at the beginning of the school year. Were it not for the curtailment of our funds by the City Council, next year we should have made rapid strides towards the completion of enough schools to accommodate every child seeking an education.

No additional buildings can be started, and in accepting the situation we have simply to rest in the consciousness that no matter whatour needs are, we cannot spend what we have not got."

How brief is the school life of the majority of the children Mr. A. G. Lane, Superintendent of Schools, shows in his report, as follows: "Sixty-seven and three-tenths per cent. of the average daily membership was in the primary grades; twenty-eight and a half per cent. was in the grammar grades, and four and 23-100 per cent. was in the high-school grades. I repeat the statement and table printed last year, showing that nearly seventy per cent. of the children who enter school each year remain in school untill they become members of the fifth grade, which is the first grammar grade, and embraces the fifth year's work."

Children usually enter school at six years of age and finish a grade a year. Mr. Lane's figures, therefore, indicate that rather more than thirty per cent. of the children leave school under the age of eleven years, forty per cent. at about that age, while rather less than thirty per cent. remain longer in school. Conceding that a portion fail to pass a grade a year, and remain in the primary grades six or seven years, the inference would still be unavoidable that two-thirds of the children leave the public schools far below the legal age of work. While this state of things continues, the factory inspectors cannot obtain complete compliance with the law prohibiting employment of children under 14 years of age.

It is sometimes urged in mitigation of the early employment of children that the ambitious ones who really care for self-improvement, can continue their studies in the night schools. On this point Mr. Lane says: There were 3,263 persons under 15 years of age in attendence (at the night schools). Many of the younger ones, pupils in the elementary grades, are irregular and lack interest, which is caused largely by physical exhaustion." Children who have worked all day with the intensity demanded by the conditions of work in our time are in no state to profit by the best possible teaching in the evening.

The introduction of manual training into the public schools (it has been introduced into 66 schools in Chicago alone during 1896) aggravates the disadvantage of the boy who drops out of the fifth grade, or a lower one, to spend his days in some wretched brainless manipulation, which teaches him no trude, and leaves him less valuable, because less eager and wide-awake, than the boy who has never worked for wages.

In the three and a half years since the creation of this department a large number of affidavits have been filled out in the office for children just 14 years old, who were going to work for the first time. The eager ambition of these children (mixed, perhaps, with a certain pleasure in escaping from school) is to earn money and "make a living." But precocity is dangerous in this, as in everything else, and later acquaintance with many of these children shows a serious deterioration in moral fibre.

A lad going to work thus early, hoping to help his widowed mother, soon finds his work precarious, and his wages, even when he is steadily employed, insufficient to maintain the family, who remain dependent on charity. If the boy, starting with this noble impulse, escape all the accidents to which the rashness of childhood subjects him even beyond the exposure common to all employés; and if he retain his health. in spite of the injurious surroundings of his work, he is still likely to deteriorate into a weary drudge, lacking all the grit and energy which every man needs who is to hold his own in the industrial life of this generation.

No acquisition of a skilled trade compensates the child of to-day for loss of the education afforded by the primary schools. There might have been some such compensation in the early days when boys learned trades which assured them a livelihood. Far from having any educational value, the work which young children now perform, teaches them chiefly instability and disregard of the future. Having learned how little they can earn by their utmost exertion, and balancing this exertion against the pay, they too often settle down into mere "corner loafers," valueless to the community, to the family, and to themselves. This undermining effect upon character, of premature entry upon the work of life, though less conspicuous than some other dangers of child labor, is no less serious.

The New York compulsory school law extends to the age of 16 years, and the New York factory law authorizes inspectors to order the discharge of children under 16 years of age who cannot read and write simple English. Under this provision the inspectors ordered the discharge of 238 illiterate children in one year, and report a marked decrease in illiteracy since the provision went into effect. Parents have learned that an immediate commercial value attaches to some slight mastery of the English tongue by their children. This prohibition of employment of children who cannot read and write in English would be especially beneficial in Illinois, where a large body of the foreign-born population is not yet assimilated.

CHILD LABOR.

We recommend that the prosecution of parents derelict under the compulsory education law be made mandatory upon local school boards, as the prosecution of manufacturers who employ children under 14 years of age is mandatory upon the Factory Inspector.

For children over 14 years of age, we recommend the enactment of the requirement that they must be able to read and write simple English before going to work.

REMOVABLE CAUSES OF CHILD LABOR IN ILLINOIS.

Manufacture is still comparatively new in Illinois, the growth of less than three decades, and the tradition of the State is one of prosperity, of maintenance of the family by the father. With the exception of the garment trades, the manufacturing industries of the State are essentially men's industries; and there is nothing in the nature of them which calls for the employment of young children. The metal, wood and food trades, three of four leading branches of manufacture, employ a heavy majority of men. The textile mills, which employ so many children in some of the eastern States, are almost wholly absent from our list of manufactures.

Among 200,140 employés found at work in manufacture in 1896, the children are 37 in the thousand; but their distribution among the industries shows how far their employment is from being a matter of fitness. Of the 7,340 children found at work, one in six is in the sweatshops of Chicago, 1,060 little girls and 128 boys. What can be more unfit than a boy over a buttonhole machine, acquiring spinal curvature, or a girl at a heavy foot-power sewing machine, incurring lasting pelvic disorder? The work done by children in the stockyards, from bone-splitting at buzz-saws by boys to packing meat into cans at unguarded machines by girls, is all unfit. These are extreme illustrations' of conditions which hold good throughout Illinois, wherever children have been found at work in manufacture. Eve:ything done by them could be quite as well and swiftly done by young people over 16 years of age.

A primary cause of child labor in Illinois is the insufficient wage of fathers of families, and the disablement and premature death of the normal bread-winner. Where men are employed in industries in which the father's wage is sufficient to support the family, as in transportation and the building trades, young children are usually kept in school. In an incredibly large number of cases, the fathers of wage-earning children not only do not support the family, but are supported by it; either because it is impossible for them to obtain work, or because they are worn out early by the overexertion of the garment worker, or disabled by the rheumatism of ditcher and digger, or by that loss of a limb which is a regular risk in the building trades and among railroad men. The failure of the State to require the safe-guarding of machinery increases, in many trades, the probability of disablement. The irresponsibility of thousands of small employers, and the skillful evasion of responsibility by great corporations, leave the workingman's family without redress or compensation when the bread-winner is disabled for life, or killed outright.

Such reasonable care for safety of life, limb and health of men at work as is already the rule in older States, would greatly diminish the number of children forced to labor. An employers' liability law which really rendered employers liable, would enable the family to live after the death or disablement of the father, without sending the children out to take his place.

Some children are sent to work because the father drinks, and does not support the family. Others leave school because the tradition is wide-spread and powerful that a child who has reached the age of confirmation is ready to enter upon the work of life. This tradition is deeply rooted among foreign colonies, where recent immigrants are eager to turn the earning capacity of the children to account at the earliest moment. "I have fed her 14 years, and now she can help me pay off my mortgages," was the reply of a stalwart, prosperous-looking immigrant when asked why he wanted an affidavit for his crookedbacked, puny child, on her 14th birthday.

A secondary cause of employment of children is the belief that their labor is cheap. This cheapness is largely illusory. In the glass industry, when the youngest boys were removed by enforcement of the law, a slight technical improvement immediately took their place; and with its help their work is now done by older boys, without added cost to manufacturers. In the book-binding trade, the folding machine is replacing the smaller girls in all the best equipped binderies. Even where no new machinery follows removal of the younger children, a boy or girl just over 16 costs very little more in wages than one under 16.

If no child under 16 years of age were employed after to-morrow, it is doubtful whether the actual increase in cost to employers generally would be perceptible.

Premature work costs the children the years of education and normal growth which prepare for healthy and useful manhood and womanhood. It engenders incompetent employés, incapable of entire self-support. It disables a large proportion of workers, by undermining their health in childhood. It often ends in mutilation by exposing ignorant and reckless boys and girls to dangerous machinery and explosives. To the children and to the community, then, this work is not cheap; it is intolerably expensive.

The development of manufacture in Illinois has been so sudden that its results have not yet arrested the attention of the people at large, as they have done in the older manufacturing states. The evil effects of labor upon children naturally forced themselves first and most strikingly upon men and women in factories and work-shops, who see the children day by day. Physicians, too, through hospital and dispensary work, and practice in working-class districts, are becoming aware of the physical injury wrought upon the young generation. Officials in charge of State and private reformatories are protesting against exposure of young boys to the temptations incident to employment in mercantile and street occupations. The growing interest in the question of child labor manifest in the pulpit and in gatherings of philanthropists rests upon the condition and prospects of the children. Thus, the demand for more adequate legislation for protecting working children is not the demand of any class. It is urged for the sake of the children themselves by all who come disinterestedly in contact with them.

I

SANITATION AND SAFEGUARDING.

Ingenious safeguards against accidents are now available, and are found in the best modern factory plants; but systematic guarding of life and limb of employés in the factories of any State is never the rule until it is required by statute. The history of industrial development since the factory system succeeded domestic manufacture shows this; and it is emphasized by the enactment of such legislation in all manufacturing countries and in the manufacturing States Illinois alone of the manufacturing States has in this country. made no provision for safeguarding life, limb or health of factory employés, and has no requirement that accidents must be reported to the factory inspectors, that they may be investigated and changes ordered to prevent their recurrence. The result is that, with the increase of manufacture in this State, there comes upon the community an increasing burden for maintenance of half orphans made by factory accidents; for support of cripples, consumpties, and other invalids who have been by preventible conditions deprived of the power of self-support.

HEALTH OF SWEATSHOP EMPLOYES.

Among injurious occupations the tenement house shops stand first, because here the work, excessive as to hours and speed, is farther ruinous because of the place in which it is done. Shops over sheds or stables, in basements or on upper floors of tenement houses, are not fit working places for men, women and children.

Shops on upper floors have no proper ventilation; are reached by narrow, filthy halls and unlighted wooden stairways; are cold in winter unless all fresh air is shut out, and hot in summer. If in old houses, they afford no sanitary arrangements beyond the vaults used by all tenants; if in modern tenements, the drains are usually out of order, water for the closets does not rise to upper floors, and poisonous gases find their way into the shops. This defective water supply, the absence of fire escapes, and the presence of the pressers' stoves greatly aggravate the danger of death by fire. Shops on middle floors are ill-lighted, ill-ventilated, and share the smells from the kitchens and drains of surrounding living rooms. Most of the places designated in this report as basements are low-ceiled, illlighted, unventilated rooms below the street level; damp and cold in winter, hot and close in summer; foul at all times, by reason of adjacent vaults or defective sewer connections. The word cellar would more accurately describe these places. Their dampness entails rheumatism, and their darkness injures the sight of the people who work in them. They never afford proper accommodations for the pressers, the fumes of whose gasoline stoves and charcoal heaters mingle with the moldy smell of the walls, and the stuffiness always found where a number of the very poor are crowded together. In shops over sheds or stables, the operatives receive from below the stench from vaults or accumulated stable refuse; from the rear the effluvia of garbage boxes and manure bins in the alleys; and from the front the odors of the tenement house yard, the dumping ground for all the families on the premises.

Work in these shops is without the mitigating circumstances found in factories where steam power is furnished, and the need of competing by foot power with workers in factories having steam power is the heaviest drain upon the health of the tenement house workers. Young backs grow crooked over heavy sewing machines; the fluff and dust from cheaply dyed woolen goods, disengaged by flying needles, irritate young eyes and membranes. Piece work, the small pay for it, and the uncertainty of its continuance, stimulate the eagerness of the workers to the highest possible pitch. Confined through long hours of unremitting toil in shops such as these, it is not strange that the sweatshop worker early succumbs to exhaustion, that his trade life is shorter than that of men in any other occupation; and that consumption, either of the lung or intestine, is the malady characteristic of the trade.

One-fourth of all the women, and one-sixth of all the children engaged in manufacture in this State are at work in these tenement shops in Chicago. They outnumber the men as four to three, being 8,369 to 6,383 males over 16 years of age. The females over 16 are 7,181, of whom fully 75 per cent. are under 20 years of age. The children of both sexes still number 1,188, notwithstanding the conviction, in 1896, of sweaters under 213 child labor charges, and the payment by them of fines and costs amounting to $1,329.20.

Further protection for the life and health of these children and very young girls is needed. It can, however, be obtained only by legislation, for in an industry in which the majority are young girls and children there is no hope that the workers can ever, by their own initiative, obtain wholesome conditions. They are the most helpless of the working class, least able to insist upon any change, certain to be found among the worst surroundings. Their power of self-protection is further diminished by the smallness of the sweat-shop group of employés, the average number to a shop being between six and seven in the present year. Hampered by this preponderance of women and children, and this numerical weakness of the workers in each shop, divided by race, religion and prejudice, the employés in these trades have no power to put an end to the system of which they are victims, nor even to mitigate its evils.

EXPLOSIONS.

In the last report attention was called to the danger attending the preparation of fireworks, and to the fact that employment of very young children at this occupation had been lessened by enforcement of the factory act. The restriction upon the employment of children, even in this dangerous occupation, is, however, not sufficient, and there has been during the present year a shocking accident at the Grosse Point works of the Chicago Fireworks Company, caused by a very young boy handling a violent explosive in his work.

The explosion at Grosse Point occurred on April 15, and an inspector visited the works on the following day. There are 14 cottages, about 60 feet apart. The cottage in which the accident occurred was a onestory building, 60x24 feet, divided into two rooms by a slight partition. At the time of the explosion six girls were rolling and pasting fire crackers on one side of the partition, and on the other side two men and the boy Borre were working. The boy was stuffing giant crackers. from a box containing a mixture of potash and antimony. The first explosion took place here, and young Borre was hurled 20 feet, wrapped in flames. He was unconscious when picked up, and died two hours later without regaining consciousness. The first explosion was followed by a second, in the room in which the girls were working. Four of the girls were not seriously injured; the fifth, Emma Simski, 14 years old, was severely burned, and had one arm broken in two places; the sixth girl, Annie Borre, sister of the boy who was killed, was torn to pieces by the explosion and buried in the debris.

Regarding the causes of the first explosion, Assistant Foreman Drew gave the inspector the following information: The management of the works is in the hands of an inexperienced man, unac-The composition which the quainted with the nature of explosives. boy was handling was dangerously strong and he (Mr. Drew), who always did the mixing had been ordered to make it stronger. \mathbf{As} much as 700 pounds was mixed at one time, although there was no place to store it, and it was kept in Mr. Drew's work-room. "I am always," he said, "at the mouth of death, because no proper storage room is provided." The 14-years-old boy, Borre, was not under the direct supervision of any older person. His orders were not to take more than 15 pounds of the explosive at any one time into the room in which he worked, but no one looked at his loads to see how much he took.

The schedules filed in this office show that, at an inspection of these works made June 18, 1895, the boy Borre was discharged because at work under the age of 14 years. In September following he reached his 14th birthday, provided himself with an affidavit to that effect, and was taken back to work. He was five months over 14 when his carelessness caused the accident from which his own and his sister's death resulted.

The following evidence before the coroner's jury is taken from the Chicago Tribune of April 16th:

Testimony was given by Assistant Foreman Charles Drew. He said he was in the next building, mixing explosive materials, when he heard the first explosion. The second took him off his feet. He got up and ran to the scene. The girls were beginning to crawl out, with their clothes on fire, and screaming with pain. He supposed the explosion occurred where Nicholas Borre was working, as that side of the building was blown to pieces, and there was no loose composition elsewhere.

"Do you think that the lives of employés were properly protected?" asked the coroner.

"That is a matter of opinion," said Drew.

"You are testifying; I want your opinion," the coroner insisted.

"I do not think so. There was too much explosive stuff there. It was not carried off fast enough. The gangways were not kept clear. I myself have taken stuff away from the doors, and I told the girls that they ought to keep the door clear. That was not my duty, but the foreman's. I had charge only in his absence."

"Did the foreman know anything about the business?"

"He only knew what I taught him. He has been foreman nearly a year. There have been four explosions within the year, but no one was ever hurt before."

Witness Drew said Foreman Seavey was the son-in-law of President Charles Kennedy of the fireworks company.

There was no means at hand to fight the fire, not even a bucket of water; and the place where the unfortunate girl, Annie Borre, had been working could not be reached until 11 o'clock. Then earth and water were used, farmers and neighbors bringing buckets with them. When the fire was sufficiently under control to permit a successful search to be made, the remains of Annie Borre were found, burned black.

The coroner's jury brought in a verdict censuring the company "for not using proper precaution to protect the lives of its employés."

The schedule filed in this office for the last inspection previous to this accident showed 35 persons at work, of whom 17 were men, 10 girls over 16 years, 3 girls under 16, and 5 boys under 16; approximately 1 child to 3 adults.

The year's list of explosions of steam boilers, converters, emery wheels, mangles and other machinery is an appalling one, and calls for preventive legislation.

ELEVATOR ACCIDENTS.

The following record of typical elevator accidents in Chicago, which does not by any means cover the accidents of a similar nature for the year, proves that there is no adequate regulation of elevator construction and service:

Emma Sochek, 15 years old, working in J. K. Farley's candy factory, at 161 South Jefferson street, was carrying boxes of candy to the freight elevator. The elevator was moved while she was gathering boxes, and the child, approaching with boxes piled so high that she could not see over them, stepped into the open shaft and fell four stories. She died next day.

Emil Anderson, or Emil Johnson, a lad in the employ of Benedict & Co., in the Kranz building, 78 State street, was caught between Digitized by Co. the elevator and the side of shaft, and his neck was broken. He was moving freight from one part of the building to another, using the elevator without understanding how to run it. A stranger in the city, in the employ of the company less than a week, his exact name was not known, nor his home or relatives. While the janitor was prying the cage away from side of shaft to release the body, the elevator dropped six floors and was splintered.

Albert Olson, office boy in Tennis & Co.'s wholesale millinery shop, 144 Wabash avenue, attempting to run elevator, had his head caught between iron door and cage; his neck was broken.

Patsy Kane, a lad of 14, running the freight elevator in the Schiller building "for fun," had his right foot nearly torn off between elevator and floor.

Henry Scraus, a youth employed in Kline's dry goods store, Halsted and 14th streets, fell down an open elevator shaft and was found dead at bottom of shaft.

Two men were fatally and one seriously injured by fall of a freight elevator in Loewenthal's paper warehouse, 515 Canal street. Paul Linde was taken to Michael Reese hospital and died in an hour. L. Z. Shapero, living at 78 Wilson street, died on Sunday following accident.

Charles Apgar, shipping clerk for Bader, Anderson & Co., glue manufacturers at 182 Lake street, was killed by fall of elevator, the cable parting, and the cage falling five stories.

The elevator in the Thos. Chalmers building, 307 Warren avenue, fell six stories while carrying three men, 1,500 pounds of brick and mortar, and several wheelbarrows. One man, Henry Freihage, living at 240 Mohawk street, received fatal injuries; a second, Charles P. Vantine, living at 711 North Oakley avenue, had left ankle broken and received internal injuries.

William Cagman, living at 5366 Marshfield avenue, fell down open elevator shaft at Swift & Co.'s packing house, where he was working; killed instantly.

Dr. M. A. Bartleson, of the Armstrong Abrasive Co., 2710 Main street, fell 25 feet down elevator shaft; severely injured.

Charles Wall, working for Wells & Nelligar, 74-76 Lake street, fell down elevator shaft from third floor; right leg broken, injured internally.

Donald St. Clair, employed at 70 Clinton street, fell down elevator shaft; died of injuries in county hospital.

John Quinn, 5 years old, fell down elevator shaft at 30 Charles place, and was killed; coroner's inquest censured owners and tenants of building for leaving shaft opening unprotected.

In the Dubuque apartment building, Indiana and Rush streets, an assistant engineer fell down elevator shaft from seventh story, and was instantly killed; had been working only a week, name not known.

A child four years old, Ernest D. Hungerford, fell through an open shaft in this building, and was killed. The coroner's inquest censured the owner for employing an incompetent elevator operator, and permitting passenger elevator to get out of repair.

The factory law should be amended to prohibit employment of miners in running elevators, and to require that elevator openings and shafts, well-holes, hoistways and hatchways be protected by automatic appliances; and elevator cabs and cars supplied with suitable safety attachments.

OTHER PREVENTIBLE ACCIDENTS.

The following cases illustrate the need of providing in Illinois those safeguards upon machinery and in places of employment which are required in other manufacturing States.

Peter Paczio, working for the McGuire Manufacturing Company, 122 North Sangamon street, was caught in belting, and thrown against ceiling; his neck was broken.

William Hessemer, oiler in Chicago avenue pumping station, was caught and crushed in fly wheel; died in Alexian hospital next day.

Joseph Loherth, knifegrinder at American Cutlery works, 191 Mather street, had clothing caught in unprotected belting, and was whirled over shaft several times; was dead when engine was stopped.

James McGrie, 18 years old, working in Meyer's brickyard, 31st and Western avenue, had clothing drawn into ungaurded cog-wheels of brick machine; died same day.

John Jakelsinski, 163 Carroll avenue, working for Griffin Car Whee Co., was killed by flying fragment of carwheel.

Anton Fisher, 744 West 17th street, employed in Wells & French's foundry, had left ankle caught in rope belt; was dragged 20 feet, and drawn between rope and revolving wheel; died same night.

Alex Kostick, living at 2944 Kelley street, laborer in Illinois Steel) Company's works, was caught between rollers and crushed to death.

John Corcoran, watchman Illinois Steel Company's works, was struck by heavy iron casting; died in Mercy Hospital.

John Phillips, laborer in Illinois Steel Company's works, was killed by electric shock from unprotected live wire.

Five men were burned in converting shed of Illinois Steel Company's works at Archer and Ashland avenues. A high blast, too near a cupola which they had filled with steel to be melted, overturned the cupola and sent the molten metal over the men. One of them, Michael Donovitch, died the next day; and another, Peter Rodvitch, a day later.

William Burr, laborer in the Illinois Steel Company's works, was caught in steam shovel, lifted 20 feet; had right leg crushed, and died same day. Joseph Winkowsky, 8430 Ontario street, laborer for Illinois Steel Company's works, had feet caught in pulley ropes and was dragged under heavy descending hammer; death was instantaneous.

William Mansfledt, 18 years old, working in Electric Wheel works, Quincy, had right arm caught in unprotected belt which was driving a wheel 250 revolutions a minute; was carried around shafting until his arm was twisted off, the body striking ceiling at each revolution.

Andrew Nelson, 1844 Ritter street, working in Deering Harvester works, had hand cut off while operating saw.

William Hahn, 14 years old, working for Maplewoods Brick Co., had hand crushed while feed clay-grinding machine.

William J. Fue, working in Swift & Co.'s packing house, had right arm taken off while oiling revolving fan.

John Laaten, aged 50 years, and John Laaten, Jr., aged 20 years, father and son, working in the Murphy Varnish factory, were mixing benzine with other varnish material; an explosion occurred, the chemicals took fire, and both men were terribly burned. The son died of his burns.

Joseph Davell, living at 120 W. 20th street, and Wm. Terwitz, living at 946 Campbell avenue, working for Monarch Cycle Co., were severely burned about hands and face by bursting mold. Terwitz's eyes were injured by the flames.

John Tem, aged 17 years, living at 8632 Baltimore avenue, and George Gossey, aged 19, living at 8747 Houston avenue, working for Hart. Cooley & Co., iron founders, South Chicago, were hoisting a heavy piece of iron when the pulley broke. Fearing they would be crushed by the falling iron, they jumped, attempting to clear a vat of boiling water which hemmed them in. Both fell into the vat, and were scalded before their fellow workmen could rescue them.

Charles Kale, living at 7911 Cottage Grove avenue, and Tazzy Guglied, 451 117th street, laborers in the Pullman foundry, were severely burned by the bottom falling out of bucket filled with molten iron.

Charles Scharman, tanner in employ of Gray. Clark & Engel, fell into a vat containing chemical extracts; died next day, Leonard Stradinger, plumber at 192 Randolph street, was fatally burned at his work; taken to Alexian hospital.

John Neill, living at 3613 Lundys land, laborer at Lipton's packing house, fell into vat of boiling lard.

Michael Joblonski, living at 4842 Cook street, working at stock yards, had feet scalded in tank of boiling water.

The deaths and disablement here recorded are not the sum of such accident in this State for the year; but they typify the maiming and killing that go on, day by day, practically unnoticed. Until the State has done all that it is possible to do by legislation to lessen the dangers of employment, it remains the duty of the inspectors to present such ghastly details as these.

DANGER FROM FIRE.

The danger of loss of life in factory fires is very general, and is growing, as high buildings are increasingly used for manufacturing purposes. Attention has been called in these reports to the need of legislation providing for adequate fire escapes, and other safeguards against fire, and it has been pointed out that in States where factory legislation has been established such provisions are enforced by the factory inspectors. Municipal ordinance has been found insufficient, and many factories are not within a city's limits, and therefore not under municipal regulation. In Illinois great numbers of high factories, without fire escape or other provision against danger from fire, are located where there is no competent fire department.

In the tenement shops of Chicago the danger from fire is much increased by the pressers' charcoal iron or gasoline stove, and these shops are generally in buildings which do not come under the municipal ordinance regulating fire escapes. Where a tenement house shop is on the third floor of a building principally of wood and with no adequate exits, filled with workmen and tenants, the situation is a dangerous one. There have been two fires during the present year which should have called attention to this.

The first, on June 11th, was at 492 Morgan street, where two buildings are occupied by eight familities and six contractors' shops, in which 65 persons work. The fire began in the basement of the rear building, and the lower part of the narrow, wooden stairway was in flames before the employes of the floors above knew that there This stairway, on the outside of the building, was the was a fire. only egress. It burned so rapidly that even the employés on the first floor above the basement could not use the stairs, and were forced to jump from a platform to the ground. There were shops on the second and third floors, also. The employés in these were nearly all able to reach the first platform and take the same leap; although some of the women shrank from the chance of broken limbs until their dresses were on fire. Three men on the upper floors were rescued with fire ladders.

The second fire occurred on November 30th, at 586-588 South Sangamon street. In was discovered at 5 o'clock in the morning, in a contractor's shop, in the rear building. There were eight shops in this building, employing 63 persons, but work for the day had not begun. The fire was checked before it reached the front building, separated from the shops by only a few feet. In the investigation which followed this fire, it was stated that there were 25 families living on these premises. The records in the office of this department show 16 families. So much gasoline was found on walls, floors and stairways of the shop building that two contractors were arrested, charged with setting the fire. They were released later, the presence of the gasoline being sufficiently accounted for by its continuous use in shops which were never cleaned. There are hundreds of buildings such as these in Chicago, endangering the lives of thousands of persons. Protective legislation should not be withheld until some frightful catastrophe, such as these cases give warning of, has occurred.

It should be made the duty of the factory inspectors to see that all buildings in which manufacture is carried on are provided with fire escapes; that they have safe and sufficient inside and outside stairways, with doors swinging outward; and that all other needed safeguards against loss of life by fire are provided.

TENEMENT HOUSE MANUFACTURE.

The attempt to deal with tenement house manufacture by legislation dates back in Illinois only to 1893. When the factory law was enacted there was very little accurate information available as to the extent of tenement house manufacture in the State. There was a general feeling that garment manufacture in tenement houses was assuming dimensions that rendered it unsafe to leave it without supervision; but no one really knew the location of even a thousand tenement house shops.

The extent of this system of manufacture has proved greater than any one foresaw, and the problem of dealing with it more difficult than any one supposed. It embraces not only cigars and garments, for which there are specific provisions in the law, but also laundry work which does not come under the law, and the manufacture of food products, to which only the child labor provisions apply. In all these industries it is very extensive, and is increasing.

While this form of manufacture is confined chiefly to Chicago, the product is sold throughout the State, and beyond its borders. The question whether tenement house manufacture can be successfully regulated or must be prohibited is, therefore, one in which the dwellers in every town, hamlet and farmhouse are vitally interested.

After three and a half years of searching, the inspectors now possess verified lists of more than two thousand garment shops, and of several hundred cigar shops, bakeries and laundries, more such workshops having been found in 1896 than in any previous year.

Nearly all the cigar shops inspected during the present year were in tenement houses. The tables for the cloak and clothing trades at the close of this chapter show how many garment shops are on tenement house premises; how many of these are over shed or stable, in basement, on upper floor, and in living rooms, and how many families are living on premises with shops.

An increasing number of candy kitchens is found in cellars; some in connection with bakeries, but many of them independent workshops. Pickles, jellies and preserves, also, are made in filthy living rooms. With few exceptions, the bread and cake bakeries are in tenement house cellars, in which work can be done only by the aid of artificial light. In such shops as these the flour barrel and molasses barrel are centers of attraction for rats, beetles and roaches; and the black floors and discolored walls make the bakers' long fight against vermin a losing one. The peculiar sour smell which greets the inspector descending into a bread and cake bakery arises from the accumulations of lemon skins, apple parings, egg shells, contents of eggs rejected by the baker, and yeast remnants, piled upon the damp earth floor near the furnace door, awaiting the moment when the baker may find time and inclination for shoveling them into the furnace. A chronic complaint of bakers relates to the overflow from tenement house yards and drains into cellar bakeries. The inspectors have no power to deal with any of these unsanitary conditions.

Although laundries do not come under the law, the great number of them found in cellars of tenement houses in which there are garment or cigar shops or bakeries, forces them upon the attention of the department. There seems to be no reason for excluding them from a factory law. They employ children under worse conditions than many other work-shops; they differ in no respect from other tenement house shops, except that while other shops are sometimes in parts of the house which are better, from the point of view of health, these are always in basements.

As originally enacted the law contained three sets of provisions, all bearing upon tenement house manufacture. One dealt with children at work; another with the protection of the public against possible infection arising in tenement house shops; the third restricted the hours of labor of women and girls.

The eight-hours section of the law, if it could have been enforced, would have gone far towards abolishing tenement house manufacture; because small groups of employés, such as are found in these shops, can yield a profit only by working inhumanly long hours. The Illinois Manufacturers' Association, however, not only promptly carried cases under this section to the Supreme Court, but instructed contractors that, while the cases were pending, the law need not be obeyed. Many of the justices taking the same view, it was found impossible to enforce the eight-hours section in these shops at any time. The short working day has, therefore, never had any real trial as a means of restricting or abolishing tenement house manufacture.

When the Supreme Court of Illinois annulled this eight-hours section (Ritchie vs. the People, March 15, 1895,) the chief value which remained to the tenement house provisions was the authority which they conferred upon the inspectors to watch the shops, prevent employment of outsiders in living rooms, and intervene in cases where work was going on in infectious premises.

During twenty months since that decision these provisions have been continuously enforced. The reports of the department have furnished consecutive official information concerning the status of tenement house manufacture; and public opinion has grown steadily in favor of the law. Regular inspections have been made; the cooperation of the local Board of Health has been enlisted in dealing with the presence of infection in the shops; and, as a last resort, the courts have been appealed to, and 111 convictions obtained during 1896, under the charge of employing persons not members of the immediate family in tenement house living rooms. Of these violations, 21 were in cigar shops, and 90 in garment shops.

THE PURCHASER'S RISK.

The rigid enforcement of the law has convinced the inspectors that the attempt to protect the health of the community while maintaining tenement house manufacture is a hopeless one. No staff of inspectors, however large and well-equipped, can grapple successfully with the essential evils of tenement house manufacture in great cities where the garment trades tend increasingly to concentrate. With nearly 15,000 garment workers employed in these shops in Chicago, and the uncompleted garments going out to the rooms of home finishers also in tenement houses, it becomes a matter of public concern that the risks involved in this system should be thoroughly understood.

There is no more stringent regulation in any State than is attempted in the Illinois law. Failure to regulate is inherent in the system of manufacture, and cannot be obviated by any method of enforcement of a statute which aims only to regulate. It is impossible to keep tenement house manufacture, and avoid its evil results. Indeed, half-way measures of protection are not only insufficient, but may prove injurious by lulling the public into a false sense of security.

The present regulation places all responsibility for garment manufacture in tenement house shops upon the contractors, who are in all respects irresponsible; and none upon wholesale manufacturers. It involves this irresponsible middle-man as employer: the small and scattered groups of workers incapable, by reason their numerical weakness, of insisting upon wholesome conditions of work; the concealment of infection (the interests of the landlord and his tenants, of the sweater and his victims, coinciding in this respect. and often obtaining the connivance of a physician of the same race and religion); the economic impossibility of wholesome surroundings for employés; and, finally, the home finisher, the most dangerous and wretched link in the chain.

Assuming thorough co-operation on the part of the physicians, the Board of Health, and the factory inspectors, physicians cannot report what they do not know; and among the poorest of the poor, the home workers in the garment trades, a physician is usually called only when death is imminent, for the purpose of avoiding a coroner's inquest, after infection may have been sent out daily from the home for a fortnight, or even longer. Each added year of experience makes it increasingly clear that the local authorities and the factory inspectors cannot know where there is infection in time effectively to warn owners of goods of the danger to which they are exposed.

The eagerness of parents to conceal the presence of disease has led them to hide, in all conceivable ways, children sick with infectious maladies. (locking the patient in a pantry, covering it with a pile of garments in process of manufacture); and to tear down quarantine cards, or post them on rear doors. Practices of this kind, which caused public protest in the small-pox epidemic of 1894, went on with no outcry during the long struggle against diphtheria in 1896. They baffle at all times, and with varying degrees of success, the efforts of all the officers, State and local, who try to protect the public health by enforcing the regulation of tenement house shops.

Even in cases in which the officers are aware in time of the presence of infectious disease, the conditions of tenement house life render quarantine impossible. The use of halls, stairs, yards, outhouses and closets in common, insures a high degree of probability of spreading any infection which finds its way into the house; and the neighborly way of visiting the sick, and sitting up with the dead, irrespective of the nature of the disease, strengthens the probability.

The instability of the sweater and his shop, which seemed as great as possible in the first year of our inspections, has increased in each subsequent year. At no time has there been so much shifting about as in the present year of depression. Never has the work of verifying the lists of contractors furnished by the manufacturers been so difficult as in 1896. The 270 garment factories in Chicago are fixed in location, in fair sanitary condition, and as easily kept under supervision as the factories of any other trade. The 2,348 contractors' shops, c n the contrary, cannot be kept under supervision even by constant searching.

Most of these contractors' shops are upon tenement house premises, usually in bad sanitary condition, in houses filled with the poorest and most helpless tenants before the shop is added. It is only when houses fall into the condition that invites disease by reason of their foul interiors and unwholesome surrounndings, that the sweat-shop is admitted. Whether in kitchen or bedroom of tenant, or in room adjacent to several families and shut off from them by the fiction of a sealed door, these shops are in the worst and most unwholesome rooms in the houses. What they are, as breeding grounds of disease, the rooms of the home finisher are also; and garments in process of manufacture are carried from one to the other. In both houses children swarm, easy prey to contagion, innocent conductors of it to the far-away homes of unsuspecting purchasers. The factory law does not empower the inspectors to order changes in any of these dangerous conditions.

No goods can be guaranteed non-infectious which have passed through a tenement-house shop, and a home finisher's living room; and, so long as the wholesale manufacturer has any goods made up on tenement house premises, none of his goods can be guaranteed free from danger of infection, since neither the retailer nor the purchaser can know which among them are tenement made.

INCREASE OF CONTRACTORS' SHOPS.

The steady and rapid growth of garment manufacture in tenement houses in Chicago is shown by the records of this department, from year to year. The following table shows the increase of contractors' shops, 1893–1896:

Year.	Shops.	Men.	Women.	Children.	Total.
1896	2, 378	6, 383	7, 181	1, 188	14, 452
	1, 715	5, 817	7, 780	1, 307	14, 904
	1, 413	4, 469	5, 912	721	11, 102
	704	2, 611	3, 617	595	6, 823

During the year there were inspected in Chicago 2,648 places in which garments were manufactured, employing 7,798 men, 13,439 women, 1,580 children, a total of 24,817. Only 270 of these 2,648 places are factories; and in the factories were employed only 3,415 men, 2,658 women and 392 children, a total of 10,065. All articles of wearing apparel, from hats to shoes, are included in the garment trades. An analysis of the table upon these trades (see Appendix A) show that of 270 factories only 35 are cloak and clothing factories. They are divided as follows: Cloaks, 14, employing 1,121 persons; ready-made clothing, 13, employing 622 persons; custom clothing, 8, employing 128 persons.

The following summary (see table on garment trades—Appendix A) shows that cloak and clothing manufacture in Chicago is carried on in 35 factories and 2,378 shops, the former employing less than 2,000 persons, and the latter almost 15,000; and that, while the 35 factories employ only 36 children, there 1,188 children in the shops:

	Number		NUMBER 2	EMPLOYED.
	of places.	Men.	Women.	Children.	Total.
Factories	35	821	1,014	36	1,871
Contractors' shops	2,378	6, 383	7, 181	1, 188	14, 752

The year has been one of unprecedented depression in the garment trades, and a result of this is the accentuation of the worst phases of tenement manufacture. The large increase in the number of shops means only that men who formerly worked together in a shop of some size are now working in bedroom and kitchen, saving the shop rent which the contractor is unable to pay. This inability to pay shop rent goes far to account for the fact that in 1896 contractors have been convicted under 90 charges of employing outsiders in their living rooms, compared with 25 convictions for the same offense in 1895.

The slight decrease in the number employed in tenement shops, comparing 1896 with 1895, (142 persons) by no means measures the decrease in the amount of work. The figure 14,752 represents the total number of persons found in all these shops at the inspection when there was most work; but during the greater part of the year there has been work only one or two days in the week. Thus the two curses which the sweating system inflicts upon its victims, instability of work and a remuneration insufficient for the maintenance of wholesome shops, have taken deeper hold than ever upon garment manufacture in Chicago.

The explicit regulations laid down in sections 1, 2 and 7 are plainly intended to clothe the inspectors with extraordinary powers, for the purpose of enabling them to keep tenement-house shops under constant supervision.

In section 1 manufacture of cigars and specified articles of clothing in rooms used for eating and sleeping purposes in tenement houses is prohibited; but the scope of this prohibition is disastrously limited by the exception that "members of the family living therein" may carry on this manufacture. Any rooms not used for living purposes, though in a tenement house, may be used for a shop, and the contractor may employ therein as many persons as he can pack into the room or rooms. This section also requires that every such workshop shall be kept clean, free from vermin and infectious or contageous matter; and that the person in control of the shop shall register it with the Board of Health.

In section 2 provision is made for condemnation and destruction of goods in process of manufacture whenever found in infectious condition.

Section 7 defines "any house, room or place" where any part of the manufacture of the articles of clothing enumerated in section 1 is carried on to be a work-shop and subject to inspection. It further requires every person, firm or corporation having such work-shop in his, their or its employ, to keep a complete list of them, and to produce it on demand of an inspector.

The method of enforcement pursued by the department has been as follows: Manufacturers of cloaks and clothing (custom and ready-made) have been called upon from time to time for the lists which section 7 requires them to keep and produce on demand of an inspector. In 1896 lists were obtained from 13 cloak houses, 50 manufacturers of ready-made clothing and 210 custom tailors. In only one instance has it been necessary to enforce the demand for a list by prosecuting the manufacturer for refusing to produce it.

The manufacturers' lists are filed in the office of this department, and the addresses thus furnished are the basis for street lists, with which the office is always provided, of outside (or contractors') shops. To keep these lists in order, corrected from day to day, requires the constant and careful work of one experienced person. Without such lists there could be nothing approaching regular supervision of the tenement shops in Chicago. The difficulty of keeping street lists accurately is increased by the fact that the name of the same contractor may be given on the lists of a dozen manufacturers, with as many variations in the name and address. The recurrent cause for corrections in the street lists is the shifting about of the irresponsible contractors. The records of a year show the same contractor in many locations; sometimes with a new name at each change; while against the street number which was his at the beginning of the year may be set down one name after another, as one contractor uses the shop, vacates it, and is succeeded by another.

When the record of inspections shows that a shop is not upon tenement house premises, and that the general provisions of the law are observed in it, subsequent inspections are no more frequent than in factories outside of the garment trade. There are shops supplied with steam power, where an entire building has been given over to manufacture: others where several tailors rent a room together, each working independently of the other, except in the matter of the rent; shops, as defined in section 7, where the kitchen tailor works alone in his family. But the typical contractor's shop, commonly known as the sweater's shop, is upon tenement house premises and, as the tables at the close of this chapter show, these form the majority. These are marked by the department as requiring constant surveillance, and efficient inspectors are detailed to the work. The frequency of inspections is limited only by the extent of the territory to be covered.

Special inspections on account of notice of contagious diseases are made, in addition to the regular inspections. By the kindly co-operation of the Chicago Board of Health, this department is daily supplied with a list of contagious diseases, as compiled for the Board from reports of the previous day. This daily list is compared with the street lists, and where our records show a shop so near a case of contagious disease as to make it possible that clothing in process of manufacture in the shop may be infected, a special inspection is made at once. In 11 months, December, 1895, to November, 1896, this department received notice of 2,461 cases of diphtheria, and of these 1,021 were in proximity to sweatshops.

Where the inspector believes there is evidence of infection, the sweater is warned not to take the goods from the shop until permission is given, the manufacturer is notified not to receive the goods, and the board of health is requested to send a physician to decide whether the goods are in an infectious condition. When small-pox was epidemic among the sweatshops in one part of Chicago in 1894, three inspectors were constantly in the infected district, a considerable amount of clothing was burned under authority vested in the Inspector by section 2 of the law, and a very large quantity was sterilized. During the present year the spread of infection has undoubtedly been checked to some degree by prompt inspection on information from the board of health, and holding goods upon infected premises until sterilized.

EXTENSION OF TENEMENT HOUSE MANUFACTURE.

It has been pointed out in previous reports that tenement house manufacture in Chicago is not only increasing, but is extending to a variety of industries; that, wherever it enters, the trade becomes a sweated trade, carried on in the worst and most unwholesome premises. In the report for 1895 attention was called to the manufacture of mattress tufts and ticks in these shops. In the present year a branch of garment manufacture not specified in the tenement house provisions of the law has rapidly increased in tenement living rooms.

In 1893 only four tenement house shops were found making caps; in 1896 there are thirty-six such shops. The number increased greatly in the last year. The reason for this is two-fold, the increased demand for soft caps by bicyclers and others following outdoor sports, and the increased profit from their manufacture, capmakers' wages having fallen from $15 and $18 per week to $4 and $5 per week under the sweating system.

The attention of those who go in for wholesome athletic exercise is especially invited to the unwholesome condition of some of the shops in which these caps are made for their use.

On a lot at 586-588 South Sangamon street stand two buildings covering the entire ground; the front one a tenement house in which 16 families live and take boarders, the rear building fitted with shops employing from 60 to 80 persons on five floors. The shops on upper floors are reached by dark and winding stairs, there is only one sink to two shops, the machines are run by foot power, the water supply is insufficient, and the closets are without adequate flush. On the fourth floor rear of this building is a cap shop.

In a tenement house on South Jefferson street, at the latest inspection two men were found making caps in the kitchen, the finished caps and the material for them scattered on an unmade bed, on the floor sticky with dirt, and on the table where "chitterlings" were lying awaiting transfer to the stove. The machine stood between table and stove. Had this been a coat, vest, pants or cloak shop, the inspector could have ordered the discharge of outside help from this filthy living room.

On the same street, a few doors away, reached by an outside, wooden stairway, narrow, steep and shaky, is the home of another capmaker. There are three rooms, and caps and cap material strewed over them all. In one room the contractor, his wife, three small and very dirty children, and three workmen each at a machine, were found. The whirr of the heavy machines did not cease while the inspector's questions were answered. The lounge and unmade bed were piled with cap-boxes and caps, and a little investigation revealed vermin in and on both. This contractor is an old acquaintance and for three years has been coaxed to clean his shop, which, under the law, he cannot be compelled to do. He grimaces and shrugs his shoulders over reproaches for failure to keep promises to move his shop, complains that lack of profit prevents it, and shows caps which he is making for 75 cents a dozen, for which last year he received $1.25 a dozen. (The caps are of fine corderoy, silk-lined, handsome ---not for workman's wear.) The man is said to own this house, and two other tumble-down houses in the neighborhood.

A man and wife who make caps together under contract have been followed through the year from one bad location to another, The last visit found them on West Twelfth Place, in a one-story wooden cottage, in the rear of a tenement house of several stories. The cottage, containing four low, dark and damp rooms, stands below the street level, and the ground under it is water-soaked. The man and woman eat, sleep and work in one room, surrendering the others to dirt and vermin; even in the one occupied, the bed was standing with posts in saucers containing a mixture for destroying vermin. The man complained of rheumatism; the woman's face was swollen with neuralgia. Just outside the windows of this living and work room were three vaults, used by tenants of three houses.

Caps are omitted from the list of articles of clothing enumerated in Section 1, which may not be made up in living rooms except by members of the family. A number of articles of wearing apparel are omitted from this list, unintentionally no doubt; and the result is great confusion in the enforcement of the law. A contractor found making coats, pants, vests, shirts, overalls, cloaks or ladies' waists in in a home shop, and employing people not members of his family, must be prosecuted for the offense. Another in the same house, with a shop under the same conditions, but making gloves, mittens, underwear, hats, caps, gaiters, shoes or neckwear, cannot be prosecuted; because the manufacture of these articles in tenement house living rooms is not restricted.

REASONS FOR PROHIBITING TENEMENT MANUFACTURE.

Under factory organization, cheapness is attained by using steam or electricity, and improved methods of work; under tenement house manufacture it is gained by hand-power and foot-power, which save the expense of a plant, but are dangerously costly to producers, consumers, and the community in which the shop is maintained.

The benefit to employés from raising tenement house work to the level of the factory cannot fail to be many-sided. It would free them from dangers arising from bake-ovens, laundry-stoves and pressers' gasoline recklessly used in buildings constructed with no reference to fire risks. It would improve their health by taking them out of tenement house shops. It would bring them into contact with strangers in larger establishments, and so promote the work of assimilating and Americanizing the foreign colonies which are now kept in isolation and inaccessible to the best influences of city life, largely by carrying on work in dwellings. The employer, obliged to afford better quarters, must enlarge the scale of his operations, and this is perhaps the greatest gain of all to tenement workers; because a large group need not tolerate such exactions of foot power and long and irregular hours of work, nor endure such unsanitary surroundings, as are easily imposed upon isolated individuals or small groups.

Tenement manufacture fosters overcrowding in tenement houses, and is especially dangerous because it brings to these houses (crowded with children who are usually more susceptible to disease than are adults) employés from homes in which there is likely to be infection. The overheating from pressers' stoves in upper stories, and from bake-ovens and laundries in cellars, aggravates very seriously the suffering of tenants during the summer. The sanitary value to these districts of removing manufacture to factories is beyond computation.

Apart from consideration of the welfare of employés or dwellers in tenement houses, it would seem reasonable that the public should demand food products cleanly prepared and garments free from infection. This demand cannot be met until bakeries, cigar and garment shops are banished from living rooms, garrets, sheds, stables and basements. At present both garments and foods are placed upon the market after exposure to extraordinary conditions of filth, and to risks of infection which have already been characterized.

The present basis of legislation upon tenement house manufacture is a false one, bulwarked by two delusions. One of these delusions is formulated in the time-worn phrase, "every man's house is his castle," interpreted to give to the dweller in the tenement house the right to turn his living rooms into a shop, to the serious injury of his employées and the jeopardy of the public health. The other delusion is the belief that the widowed mother can support her orphan brood by finishing garments in her home. No widow can do this. She who attempts it must not only work in this way to the ruin of her home life, but also receive charity from public or private sources. There is no decent living to be made at the foot-power sewing machine, much less at hand sewing, in these days of steam and electric-Even if women could do this, it would be at too high a cost itv. to the community, when they demoralize a great industry, and run the risk of spreading infectious disease.

It is incredible what power these two delusions have for prolonging the life of the system. They have always to be met before a reasonable hearing can be obtained for the assurance that the only way to deal effectively with tenement house manufacture is to abolish it.

Hitherto the attempt has always been to keep the system, and get rid of its sensational features, dealing with each industry separately. This effort to regulate has not been successful in any State; and its failure in the Illinois factory law has been shown in these reports. In the interest of consumers, producers, and dwellers in tenement districts, future measures should embrace laundries and bakeshops, as well as the shops now specified in the law; should, indeed, embrace all industries carried on in tenement house premises, prohibiting manufacture there for all alike.

Whatever may be urged in extenuation of crowding shops into tenement houses in New York and other older cities, surely there can be no excuse for the tenement workshop where land is as abundant as in Chicago. With the surrounding prairie inviting the population to disperse, and trolleys, cables, steam and elevated roads facilitating the process of dispersion, the most conservative now hesitate to defend the tenement house as a place for employment and for production of goods. It would seem easier now than ever before to enact and enforce a sweeping prohibition of tenement house manufacture.

When this prohibition is in force, there will still be need for Federal legislation, to protect Illinois purchasers from infection liable to be conveyed to them in garments made in other States.

TABLES ON THE CLOAK AND CLOTHING TRADE.

Explanatory—The number of outside shops in the cloak and clothing trades, and the number of persons employed in them, are shown in Appendix A, summary of garment trades in Chicago and Cook county. In the tables which follow, many of these shops with their employés appear more than once; because more than one manufacturer sends work to the same shop, and the shop with its employés appears in the summary of each manufacturer who has work done in it.

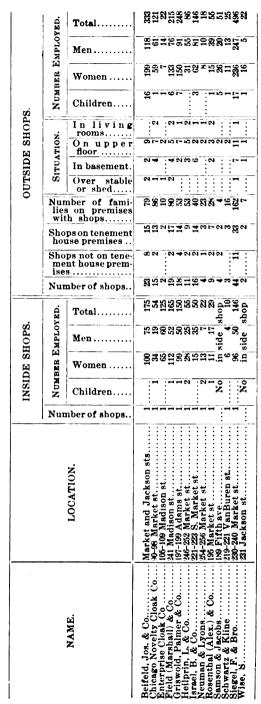

The location of outside shops is ascertained from lists which the law requires the manufacturers to keep and produce on the demand of an inspector, the lists are verified by inspections of the shops, and the schedules of the inspections, on which these tables are based, are filed in the inspector's office.

Wherever the words "No inside shop" occur, the meaning is that no garment is made up on the premises named. The cutting is done there, after which the garment is sent out to be made and finished.

To each manufacturer there is given in these tables one line showing: The inside shop (if any) and its employés; the total number of outside shops and the number of employés; the number of these not upon tenement house premises; the number on such premises; the number of families living on the premises with shops; the situation of the tenement shops.

In the next column to that which gives the total number of outside shops is the number not on tenement house premises. Of these, some are in buildings given over entirely to clothing manufacture; are usually, though not always, supplied with steam power, and are in fair sanitary condition; others are in store fronts, with one family living on the same premises; and still others in a room of a dwelling which is not classed as a tenement house, because only one family lives on the premises.

It is shown: (1) That most manufacturers have some shops not on tenement house premises, but more shops that are on such premises (compare columns 2 and 3 of outside shops); (2) that these tenement house premises are, as a rule, crowded with tenants (compare columns 3 and 4 of outside shops); (3) that a large proportion of these shops are over stables or sheds, in basements, mixed in with the sweater's family, or upon upper floors (see columns of situation of tenement shops); and upper floors of these buildings where shops and tenants are crowded together are almost invariably found with defective water supply, pest-breeding closets, walls clothed with filth, infested with vermin.

CLOAKS-RECAPITULATION.

Beifeld, Joseph & Co.—One inside shop, employing 175 persons; 23 outside shops, employing 333 persons. Of the 23 shops, 15 are on tenement house premises, with 79 families living on premises. Of these 15 shops, 2 are over shed or stable, 2 in basement, 9 on upper floor.

Chicago Novelty Cloak Co.—One inside shop, employing 54 persons; 15 outside shops, employing 121 persons. Of the 15 shops, 13 are on tenement house premises, with 86 families living on premises. Of these 13 tenement house shops 1 is over shed or stable, 4 are in basement, 7 on upper floor, 2 in living rooms.

Enterprise Cloak Co.—One inside shop, employing 125 persons; 2 outside shops, employing 22 persons. Both shops are on upper floor, tenement house premises, 10 families living on premises; 1 shop is over shed or stable.

Field, Marshall & Co.—One inside shop, employing 165 percens: 19 outside shops, employing 214 persons. Of the 19 shops, 17 are on tenement house premises, with 80 families living on premises. Of these 17 tenement house shops, 2 are over shed or stable, 4 in basement, 5 on upper floor, 2 in living rooms.

Griswold, Palmer & Co.—One inside shop, employing 150 persons; 18 outside shops, employing 248 persons. Of the 18 shops, 14 are on tenement house premises, with 53 families living on premises. Of these 14 tenement house shops, 2 are in basement, 7 on upper floor, 1 is in living rooms.

Heilprin, L. & Co.—One inside shop, employing 55 persons; 11 outside shpps, employing 86 persons. Of the 11 shops, 9 are on tenement house premises, with 53 families living on premises. Of these 9 tenement house shops, 3 are in basement, 5 on upper floor, 2 in living rooms.

Israel, B. & Co.—One inside shop, employing 50 persons; 16 outside shops, employing 146 persons. Of the 16 shops, 14 are on tenement house premises, with 40 families living on premises. Of these 14 tenement house shops, 6 are in basement, 2 on upper floor, 1 in living rooms.

Neuman & Lyons—One inside shop, employing 22 persons; 4 outside shops, employing 18 persons. Of the 4 shops, 3 are on tenement house premises, with 23 families living on premises. Of these 3 tenement house shops, 2 are on upper floor, 1 in living rooms.

Rosenthal (Alex) & Co.--One inside shop, employing 29 persons; 9 outside shops, employing 55 persons. Of the 9 shops, 7 are on tenement house premises, with 28 families living on the premises. Of these 7 tenement house shops, 2 are in basement, 3 on upper floor, 2 in living rooms.

Samson & Jacobs—No inside shop; 4 outside shops, employing 51 persons. Of these 4 shops, 2 are on upper floors of tenement houses, with 4 families living on the premises.

Schwartz & Kline—One inside shop, employing 10 persons; 3 outside shops, employing 25 persons. These outside shops are all on tenement house premises, two on upper floors, 16 families living on premises.

Siegel, F. & Bro.—One inside shop, employing 146 persons; 44 outside shops, employing 496 persons. Of the 44 shops, 33 are on tenement house premises, with 162 families living on premises. Of these 33 tenement house shops, 1 is over shed or stable, 7 are in basements, 11 are on upper floors, and 1 is in living rooms.

Wise, S.—No inside shop; 2 outside shops, employing 22 persons. Both are on tenement house premises, with 7 families living on premises. One shop is in basement, the other on upper floor.

APPENDIX A.

The following tables present the statistical statement of work done by the inspectors from December 15, 1895, to December 15, 1896:

The towns and cities visited during the year were: Alton, Anna, Aurora, Batavia, Belleville, Belvidere, Bloomington, Cairo, Canton, Carmi, Carpentersville, Centralia, Chicago and Cook county, Cobden, Danville, Decatur, DeKalb, Dixon, Dundee, East St. Louis, Elgin, Freeport, Galatia, Galena, Geneva, Harrisburg, Hoopeston, Jacksonville, Joliet, Jonesboro, Kewanee, LaSalle, Libertyville, Lincoln, Lockport, Makanda, Marion, Metropolis, Moline, Morris, Mound City, Murphysborough, Ottawa, Paris, Pekin, Peoria, Peru, Quincy, Rock Falls, Rockford, Rock Island, Rossville, Sandwich, Sparta. Springfield, Sterling, St. Charles, Streator, Sycamore, Turner, Vandalia, Vienna, Waukegan and North Chicago-63 in all. The tables upon manufactures in Chicago have precedence and these are given by trades.

No report is made in these tables upon establishments visited during the year and found not working. Nor is any record made of the different visits to the same establishment, although it was found necessary to inspect many of the manufactories and work-shops once a month. The figure 6,707, given in the summary table as the total number of places inspected during the year, must not be taken as indicating the total number of inspections, as many of these 6,707 places were inspected from 5 to 12 times each during the year.

The number of employés credited to each establishment is the highest number found at work in that establishment at any time during the year. Affidavits were demanded by the inspectors for the 7,340 children to show that they were of legal age to work, i. e., over 14 years; unless such affidavits were produced, discharge of the children followed; and, where the circumstances required it, prosecution of the employers.

The tables show the number of establishments coming under the law, by trades and by towns; the number of girls between 14 and 16 years of age; the number of boys between 14 and 16 years of age; the number of females over 16 years; the number of males over 16 years; the total number of children, and the total number of employés.

The summary tables which close this statistical statement show, by trades, the number of establishments inspected, and the number of employés found at work in them in 1896, the same for 1895, and the increase in 1896 over 1895.
